By the Associated Press

London, May 10. — Britain marched to meet Adolf Hitler on every front tonight under the leadership of Nazi-hating, hard-hitting Winston Churchill, who took from the faltering hands of Neville Chamberlain the helm of an empire plunged into its greatest battle.

Swiftly fulfilling Britain's pledge to fight for Europe's newly invaded Low Countries, British troops marched with their French allies into Belgium and the Royal Air Force bombed enemy-occupied airdromes in The Netherlands in a counter-stroke to Germany's lightning invasion.

The dramatic clash preliminary to the first great blood-letting by the contending powers was accompanied by Chamberlain's resignation as prime minister and a final paean of hate against the man he trusted at Munich to "give us peace in our time."

Chamberlain Offers Services

His voice breaking with emotion, the 71-year-old Chamberlain said he would serve in any capacity under his 65-year-old successor, who, he predicted, would be successful in forming a new government of all parties. The Laborites already had decided to join a cabinet under a prime minister other than Chamberlain.

Chamberlain called upon the nation to "fight and work until the wild beast that has sprung from his lair upon us has been finally disarmed and overthrown."

Churchill is expected to complete his war cabinet this week-end, possibly tomorrow. Liberal Leader Sir Archibald Sinclair is considered almost a certainty for a ministerial post, and it is generally expected that David Lloyd George, World War Prime Minister and outspoken Chamberlain critic, will be included.

Moving through lines of welcoming Belgians, British soldiers sang on their way to the Belgian battlefields

War Efforts Swell

The empire's war effort swelled apace, despite the cabinet crisis, bearing out Chamberlain's words that if Hitler "counted on our internal divisions to help him he has miscalculated the mind of this people."

These developments pointed up the gathering speed of the empire's war machine:

The Royal Air Force threw down the bars and called for volunteers.

Britain "reserved the right" to retaliate for any bombing of civilians.

R. A. F. planes bombed Germany's invading troops in Belgium and Nazi-seized airports in Holland.

Britain took Danish-owned Iceland under protective custody to prevent, it was announced, its possible use as a submarine and air base by the Nazis, now entrenched in Denmark.

All R. A. F. personnel was recalled.

The ministry for home security asked every Briton to carry his gas mask and watch for invading parachute troops.

Americas Challenged, Roosevelt Declares

Aggressions in Europe Menace Republics' Way of Life, He Says, and Asserts They Will Fight for Their Standards, Culture

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night warned the American nations that continuance of aggression in Europe "presents a definite challenge" to the American way of living.

At the same time he expressed belief that "in the long run and if it be necessary," the American peoples "will act together to protect and defend by every means" the science, culture, freedom and civilization of the Western Hemisphere.

In an address opening the eighth American Scientific Congress in Constitution Hall, attended by several thousand scholars, scientists and diplomats from North and South America, the President cautioned against an undue sense of security "based on the false teaching of geography."

Emphasizing his warning, he declared that "in terms of the moving of men and guns and planes and bombs" every acre of American territory "is closer to the homes of modern conquerors and the scenes of attacks in Europe than was the case in historic efforts to dominate the world in by-gone centuries."

The address, eagerly awaited in view of the lightning spread of Europe's war, was interrupted frequently by applause and cheers.

Mr. Roosevelt declared he is glad the peoples of the Americas are "shocked and angered" by news that Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg "have been cruelly invaded by force of arms."

He contrasted existence in the New World where "we live for each other and in the service of a Christian faith" to that abroad where "war or politics has compelled teachers and scholars to leave their

Belgians Fighting 'Foot by Foot;' Onset Stemmed, Leader Declares

By Robert Okin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Brussels (Saturday), May 11. British and French troops last night were pouring into the most important areas of Belgium, although the government, fighting for life against the horde of German invaders, is keeping their exact location secret.

Smiling Belgians cheered the quick Allied aid and handed the troops flowers as they entered the country in swelling numbers.

Four R. A. F. aviators, interned when their planes crashed in Belgium earlier in the war, were released amid wild cheers. One was an American, Jim Trotter, formerly of Charlottesville, Va., who crashed February 24.

Refugees Stream In

While the Allies poured in, refugees streamed from the combat zones where the Belgian army, under personal command of King Leopold, declared it had halted the German invaders all along the border area.

King Leopold proclaimed to his people today that the Belgian army is "fighting foot by foot."

Traps, barricades, blown-up bridges and roads stopped the Nazis' land invasion, Defense Minister Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis told a cheering House of Deputies last night, while behind the lines Belgian troops "dealt with" German parachute troops.

Eight German planes were shot down, an official announcement said.

Meanwhile the economics ministry ordered food rationing to begin today at fixed prices, and Belgium experienced its first blackout since the nervous weeks of last fall.

Sirens signaling the start or end of air raid alarms wailed almost constantly. Cafes were closed and deserted.

Gas Masks Appear

Windows were hastily taped to prevent injuries from flying glass, and "blackout paper" to seal cracks appeared like magic, as did gas masks.

Belgian authorities heard of suspicious German troop movements at 9 o'clock last night (3 p. m., E. S. T.) and immediately placed the army on guard. The foreign office said the bombing of Antwerp at 4:30 this morning opened hostilities.

The first German troops, preceded by waves of bombing planes, crossed the border at Gemmenich, near Aix-la-Chappelle, close to the point where the first German troops invaded the country in 1914.

Fierce Fighting Rages in Streets In Rotterdam, Nazi Unit Cut Off

By Max Harrelson,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Amsterdam (Saturday), May 11.—British troops came last night to the defense of the Netherlands, fighting tenaciously and for the first time in 145 years against a foreign invader.

Soldiers of the British army crossed the North Sea by transport, landing at several points on the west Dutch coast, while the Dutch army struggled with a German blitzkrieg which bridged and criss-crossed the kingdom's defenses by land, air, and water.

Today one British detachment marched through war-darkened Amsterdam on its way east, where the Dutch, marshaling both guns and the flood-waters they used first during the Spanish siege of Leyden in the sixteenth century, were fighting bravely and with some success.

Some of the Germans, dropped by parachute, already were in western Holland, fighting in the streets of Rotterdam. But their position there was not a happy one.

The Dutch commander in chief issued the following communique today:

"A German flying officer who has been taken prisoner made the statement that the German high command until this morning did not dare inform their own officers about the intended violation of Dutch neutrality which Holland had maintained strictly on all sides.

"In contradiction to the communique of the German high command in which it is denied that 70 German airplanes have been shot down by us, I state that this number has increased to more than 100.

"Moreover, on one of the airfields that was recaptured by Dutch troops 14 undamaged enemy planes fell into Dutch hands.

"All airfields that had been occupied by the Germans are now in our hands except one.

"A shameless act was committed by German troops when a German officer named Hohendorf, who was in command, threatened to kill captured Dutch troops who had been in charge of an airfield if the Dutch should fire against the airfield."

A London Air Ministry communique issued simultaneously said:

"German troop-carrying aircraft on the airdrome at Rotterdam and on a beach near The Hague were attacked and destroyed Friday afternoon by Royal Air Force aircraft of the bomber command. The raids, which were carried out by strong forces of our bombers, followed so quickly on German occu-

British May Send Troops to Curacao

Authorities Here Say Monroe Doctrine Is Not Infringed by Landings, Intended as an Aid to Holland

France has landed 150 "fully equipped" marines at Aruba, in The Netherlands West Indies, and it is understood here that a similar landing of British armed men will be made at Curacao.

It was emphasized in well-informed circles here that no violation of the Monroe Doctrine is involved, since the landings are for the purpose of aiding the Dutch authorities and, it was said, are in no way a challenge to the existing sovereignty.

The action of the Netherlands' new allies, it was pointed out, is held to constitute no threat to the Dutch flag and is interpreted as the offering of additional policing, if needed, to prevent sabotage.

Word of the French marines' landing was brought to Washington in an Associated Press dispatch and efforts in the capital to determine the legality of the action, under the Monroe Doctrine, brought disclosure that the British are acting similarly.

It appears clear that the United States would interpose no objection to the steps, since only a contemplated change in sovereignty over a portion of American territory would conflict with the warning first enunciated by President Monroe.

Willemstad, Netherlands West Indies, May 10.—The governor today proclaimed a state of war against Germany in the territory of Curacao, a possession of the Netherlands.

All Germans in the rich oil shipping island of Aruba were detained, and sent by steamer to an unnamed island.

The crew of the German ship Antilla set fire to their vessel and nearly burned it out. The crew was detained.

The proclamation of a state of war and martial law in Curacao followed attempts by the crews of three other

By Roy P. Porter

Paris, May 10.—Allied forces driving into the face of Germany's invasion of the Low Countries have advanced on a front extending more than 200 miles from the North Sea to the juncture of the German, Luxembourg and French territory east of the Moselle River, the French high command announced tonight.

It reported continuing progress in Belgian territory while in tiny Luxembourg military advices said there were "sharp combats" as vanguards of the Allied and Nazi war machines established contact.

At the same time, while German warplanes thundered into France in widespread raids, killing at least 40 civilians, French defenders aloft or manning antiaircraft batteries blasted 44 German planes out of the sky, the high command announced.

Germany's push to the west, the high command said, extended to the region of Sierck, French town on the Moselle River a short distance from the juncture of Germany, Luxembourg and France.

Matching action on the military front in preparation for what one spokesman said might be the "most gigantic battle of all time," Premier Reynaud widened his cabinet with two new ministers and dropped all but 4 of 13 undersecretaries.

Paris Guns in Action

Evidence that the war had broken out in earnest was seen in German raids and bombings over almost all of France. Towns in the north, the east and even central regions of the country were subjected to attack and the list of dead and injured mounted steadily.

The Paris region, raided early this morning, again heard antiaircraft batteries in action tonight.

A war ministry spokesman said the Allies backed up assurances of assistance for invaded Belgium and the Netherlands by sending a long-prepared French-British war machine rumbling north and east into Belgium.

The vanguards of this force, it said, made contact with Nazi motorized infantry units which pushed into the little duchy of Luxembourg this morning.

Maginot Line on Alert

While the main body of France's defenders awaited a possible onslaught along the Maginot Line, antiaircraft batteries in Paris and a dozen other cities blazed into action against German bombers which struck deeply and repeatedly into France during the day, taking a casualty toll of at least 40 killed and as many injured.

A few hours after the Nazis extended the war to the low countries, Premier Reynaud broadened his cabinet to a virtual national union government by including Rightist leaders Louis Marin and Jean Ybarnegaray as ministers without portfolio. They also will become members of the inner war committee of the cabinet.

The French government announced its intention of replying with air bombardments on other than military objectives if the Germans bomb such targets, as air raid casualty and damage reports came in from all parts of the country.

Capitol Hill Leaders Urge More Defenses

Glass Says Reich Should Be 'Wiped Off Face of the Earth'

By Robert C. Albright

Redoubled National defense efforts were urged yesterday by key Capitol spokesmen on military and naval matters as the war's spread through Europe's lowlands forced a recapitulation of American defense needs.

"It is the duty of statesmen to look ahead and not be caught unprepared if and when cause for strenuous defense is forced upon us," Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a speech last night.

Earlier in a statement Pittman said "our Government has cause to watch developments in the Orient."

Chairman Elmer Thomas, of the Senate's Army Appropriations subcommittee, favored above-budget provisions to fully equip as soon as possible a combined Army and National Guard force of 450,000 men. Thomas held out the possibility of a large lump sum emergency appropriation to be used to meet any need.

Chairman David I. Walsh, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said America must be on its guard against war hysteria "and to maintain our own peace," but advised strengthening of defenses "at every point, realizing always that our first line of defense is our Navy and that we must make it impregnable."

Stocks, Bonds Drop $1 to $5; Staples Soar

Cotton Off $1.50 To $2.50, However; Currencies Plummet

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 10.—Stock and bond prices in the world's major exchanges crumpled today as international economics underwent its own blitzkrieg in the wake of the German invasion of the Low Countries.

Simultaneously, many raw staple commodities, such as rubber and tin, wheat, corn and sugar, soared for the same reason. Of the major commodities, only cotton reversed the upward trend, selling off as much as $1.50 to $2.50 a bale on contraction of foreign outlets for American export supplies.

Extension of the war placed at stake the biggest trade interests of any of the smaller nations thus far involved, in that Dutch possessions and Belgian territories are rich in resources of tin, oil, quinine, sugar, tobacco, spices, copper and rubber.

Domestic stocks on the New York Exchange tumbled from $1 to $5 a share in one of the most active day's trading in recent months, with transfers of 2,086,240 shares. Bonds likewise plummeted on an active market which saw sales of $10,485,550.

Foreign exchange broke under the heavy pressure, the British pound falling to an all-time low of $3, with $2.90 bid. A late rally brought the pound up to $3.16, a net loss of 19 cents for the day. The French franc was off sharply in sympathy and trading was suspended in Belgian and Dutch moneys.

War Bulletins

Battle of Narvik Rages On

Stockholm, May 10 (AP).—The Battle of Narvik, almost forgotten in the rush of events in western Europe, raged on today with British naval guns pounding the German-held northern Norwegian ore port and Allied-Norwegian troops drawing tighter their ring of steel by land.

The Germans were reported intensifying efforts to land additional parachute troops to aid the besieged garrison.

English Air Casualties Listed

London, May 10 (AP).—The air ministry tonight issued a casualty list covering an unspecified period, showing:

In action—14 killed, 6 wounded, 37 missing. On active service—19 killed, 4 wounded, 12 died.

The list brought the announced totals to 252 killed, 45 wounded and 245 missing in action and 455 killed, 75 wounded and 224 died on active service.

Air Alarms Heard Through France

Paris (Saturday), May 11 (AP).—Widespread air alarms sounded throughout France this morning as French-British troops raced to positions on a new, extended front.

Yugoslav-Reich Borders Closed

London, May 10 (U.P.).—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Belgrade reported tonight that the Yugoslav-German frontier had been closed at Naribor.

Buenos Aires, May 10 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo announced tonight that he had been informed by Carlos Brebbia, Argentine Minister to The Netherlands, that the Argentine Legation in The Hague had been struck by a bomb.

Nazis Charge Allies Bombed City, Killed 24

Five-Fold Reprisal Promised for Raids On German Towns

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 10.—Three enemy planes bombed the "open city" of Freiburg in southwestern Germany this afternoon, killing 24 civilians, German authorities said tonight, adding that Germany will answer fivefold. The bombs were said to have dropped in the center of the city.

A communique said:

"On May 10 three enemy airplanes attacked with bombs the open city of Freiburg in Breisgau, which lies entirely outside operations and is not a military objective.

Reprisals Promised

"Bombs fell on the inner city and killed 24 civilians.

"As a reprisal for this action, which is counter to international law, the German air force will answer in the same manner.

"From now on every further regular enemy bombing attack on the German population will be answered five-fold by German planes on an English or French city."

[In London the British air ministry described as "quite untrue" and "a further example of German mendacity" the German allegation that Allied planes bombed Freiburg.]

Italy Holds To Course Set by Duce

Nonbelligerency Unshaken; Vatican Denounces Invasion

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 10.—Italy, linked with Belgium by ties of royal blood and with Germany by a pact of steel, was firm in its nonbelligerency tonight, unshaken by the outbreak of real war in Europe.

Although threatened with eventual involvement in the spreading conflict, the country remained outwardly calm.

It was thought probable and only natural that more reservists would be called soon to reinforce the army of 1,250,000 men as a precautionary measure.

High Fascists Puzzled

United States Ambassador Phillips likewise found nothing to recommend that Americans quit Italy for their safety. High Fascists puzzled over probable effects of the resignation of Prime Minister Chamberlain and the succession of Winston Churchill.

Fascist opinion was divided between the idea that Churchill would force a more vigorous prosecution of the war and the opposite theory, that the democratic system could not produce any government capable of beating the German dictatorship to the punch.

In a day of intense diplomatic activity, foreign diplomats called on Foreign Minister Count Ciano, on one another and at the Vatican, where Pope Pius XII was described as "shocked and deeply grieved."

'Wise Money' Riding Today On Bimelech in Preakness

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 10.—Whether you are going to see it, hear it or read about it, this Golden Jubilee Preakness is going to be a hoss race. Whether you use form, figures, tips or hatpins, tomorrow, there is going be a lot of hustling, scuffling and pushing before a horse's name is painted opposite 1940 on the historic stands of the Maryland Jockey Club.

A week ago tonight, the Preakness was regarded as only No. 2 on Bimelech's stake parade. The Bradley colt was labeled invincible but sundown of Derby Day found him beaten off by Gallahadion and the Preakness was made. Baltimore isn't exactly Louisville on Derby-eve or even Washington the night before inauguration but the morrow will bring upward of 50,000 tender and calloused turf fans to see the fiftieth running of a race first contested in 1873.

The bulky field of possibly 12 starters, forecast earlier in the week, had dwindled to nine when the important business of placing the entries was completed this morning. Minor injuries and plain lack of class eliminated several, leaving the probability of eight entering the Puett starting gate for the classic.

Despite his failure at Louisville, Bimelech will not lack for support in the mutuel department, and most line makers held him at 8 to 5 tonight. Opposed to the 1939 juvenile champion are seven other colts and a gelding. They are Milky Way Farm's Gallahadion, W. L. Brann's Pictor, Charles S. Howard's Mioland, Harold Clark's Royal Man,

Witness Tells of 'Raging Hell' Over Holland's Burning Cities

By Grattan P. McGroarty
United Press Staff Writer

Leyden, The Netherlands, May 10.—I watched the raging hell of an air blitzkreig today over little Holland where miles of tulips blazed in spring glory.

Clouds of dense black smoke rolled over the flat countryside from objectives hit in the German bombardment.

Overhead was the whining roar of British, Dutch and German planes in combat and the chatter of their machine guns.

I roved all night and today in the country around Amsterdam, The Hague, Rotterdam and Leyden.

A Dutch officer near Rotterdam hinted that the Germans had struck that port—Holland's greatest—a smashing blow.

"I can't tell you military secrets," the officer said, "but I hate to think about what the situation is at Rotterdam."

Near Leyden I saw heavy clouds of black smoke rising. The Dutch military would not let me approach the scene, but it was evident that some great fire, probably started by German bombs, was raging.

The Dutch commanders were calm and unruffled despite the constant roar of planes. The Germans were attempting to machine gun concentrations of Dutch troops, but everywhere the Dutch antiaircraft guns were in action.

I was amazed at the painstaking, elaborate nature of the Dutch defenses. It was obvious that the Germans had a healthy respect for the Dutch antiaircraft defenses. The German bombers I saw were flying

Over Our Shoulder

AN ADVERTISEMENT FOR THE SUNDAY POST

WHILE the third term talk was at its height, two Republicans strolled by the White House just as the President's car rolled down the drive. One of the Republicans pointed to the White House. "The question is, Dewey or Taft?" he said. "No," replied the other, pointing to Roosevelt in the car, "the question is, do he or don't he?"

". . . do he?"

Not even George Gallup can answer that one, but in Sunday's Post Gallup's most recent "iffy" poll shows how the public would vote right now—if the race were between Dewey and Roosevelt—if between Dewey and Hull.

Because this is May and not November, and because around 10% of the voters are still undecided, this Gallup Poll may be even more significant of the relative vote-getting powers of the two Democrats than of the Republican's chances against either.

Speaking of questions brings to mind Shirley Povich's crack about the Nats: "Not who's pitching for Washington today—but how many!"

What Taft the First put asunder "Our Town in Pictures" has joined. The last official act of President Taft was to sign the bill breaking the Department of Commerce and Labor into the separate ones which are now neighbors across 14th street. In Sunday's Post the eight-page picture section tells the pictorial story of what goes on in the domains of Hopkins and Perkins.

Senator Tobey, foe of the census, is urged to note carefully the page devoted to that bureau.

Senator "Stem the Alien Tide" Reynolds is directed to the pictures on the Immigration Bureau.

Republic Steel's Tom Girdler would enjoy the photographs of the wage and hour division and perhaps the strip showing the settlement of the National Symphony labor dispute.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be interested in the Labor Department's work for women and children.

Self-starter Inventor Kettering would be fascinated by the Bureau of Standards and the Patent Office, as shown in these pictures.

The Chamber of Commerce's attention is called to the picture strips on the Bureaus of Labor Statistics and Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

And Mr. and Mrs. Washington, as well as their children in school, will get still another glimpse into the machinery of government through this Sunday Post picture section.

Hemisphere Challenged, Roosevelt Says

And he assailed those who use the scientists' inventions of peace to "dominate hundreds of millions of people" and who, "if successful in that aim will, we must admit, enlarge their wild dream to encompass every human being and every mile of the earth's surface."

Earlier, at his press conference, the President had declared that the newest German attack on its neighbors brought no change that he could see in the likelihood of this country remaining out of the war.

Then, wearied by an all but sleepless night, he plunged again into one of the most trying days of his Administration, conferences with his advisers on national defense and foreign relations, talks witht foreign diplomatic representatives on their latest news from the war scene, and, to cap it all, delivery of the highly important address to the Western Hemisphere scientists.

Mr. Roosevelt made his statement regarding this country's neutrality after his press conference had been delayed an hour by a night-summoned conference of military and diplomatic advisers to discuss new problems hurled upon the United States by the low country blitzkrieg.

He Praises Wilhelmina

His only reaction to the invasion itself came in praise for the Thursday night statement by Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, in which she pledged that she and her people would "do their duty" to repel the invasion.

Queen's Protest

The Queen had said:

"I herewith direct a flaming protest against this unprecedented violation of good faith and violation of all that is decent in relations between cultured states."

The President commented:

"I think I can say personally I am in full sympathy with the very excellent statement that was given out, the proclamation by the Queen of Holland. Let it go at that. It is worth reading."

Asked whether the chances of this country remaining out of the war had been affected by the sudden spread of the conflict, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I see no change in the situation in that respect."

September Statement

He said in answer to a question that the situation was still as it was when he made his "blackout of peace" statement at the start of the war. At that time, September 3, he declared:

"I hope the United States will keep out of this war. I believe that it will. And I give you assurance that every effort of your Government will be directed toward that end. As long as it remains within my power to prevent, there will be no blackout of peace in the United States."

Grave as he talked to the reporters, Mr. Roosevelt said no change was contemplated at present in the sea areas embraced in the combat zones from which American ships are barred under the neutrality law. A question as to any changed status of the Dutch East Indies was dismissed with the comment that it had seven ifs in it.

He said, in response to questions, that no conclusions on procedure in the immediate future had been reached at his conference with the defense, financial and legal experts just before the press conference.

To the earlier discussion he had summoned Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Attorney General Jackson, Undersecretary of State Welles, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

The entire war situation was canvassed at a Cabinet meeting lasting more than an hour and a half. It was said that all the war news that had appeared in the press was discussed. Word of Prime Minister Chamberlain's resignation in London was received in the course of the Cabinet meeting, but no official comment was forthcoming.

Between these meetings, the numerous calls of ambassadors and ministers and preparation of his address for last night, the President kept in closest touch with reports received by the State Department from its representatives in Europe.

Cudahy Reports Battles

John Cudahy, American Ambassador at Brussels, informed the department that German forces had overrun the whole of Luxembourg and all of Limburg, a province of Holland.

The Ambassador's information was given by telephone to American Ambassador Bullitt in Paris who relayed it to Secretary Hull.

Text of Roosevelt Speech on Science and War

Fellow Servants of the Americas:

All of the men and women of this Pan American Scientific Congress have come here tonight with heavy hearts. During the past few years we have seen event follow event, each and every one of them a shock to our hopes for the peaceful development of modern civilization. This very day three more independent nations have been cruelly invaded by force of arms.

In some human affairs the mind of man grows accustomed to unusual actions if they are oft repeated. This is not so in the world happenings of today—and I am proud that it is not so. I am glad that we are shocked and angered by the tragic news from Belgium and The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The overwhelmingly greater part of the population of the world abhors conquest and war and bloodshed—prays that the hand of neighbor shall not be lifted against neighbor. The whole world has seen attack follow threat on so many occasions and in so many places during these later years. We have come, therefore, to the reluctant conclusion that a continuance of these processes of arms presents a definite challenge to the continuation of the type of civilization to which all of us in the three Americas have been accustomed.

Old World at War

I use this Pan American Scientific Congress as one of many similar illustrations. It is no accident that this meeting takes place in the New World. In fact, this hemisphere is now almost the only part of the earth in which such a gathering can take place. Elsewhere war or politics has compelled teachers and scholars to leave their great calling and to become agents of destruction.

We, and most people in the world, believe in a civilization of construction and not of destruction. We, and most people in the world, believe that men and women have an inherent right to hew out the patterns of their own individual lives, just so long as they as individuals do not harm their fellow beings. We call this by many synonymous terms—individual liberty, civil liberty, democracy.

Until now we permit ourselves by common consent to search for truth, to teach the truth as we see it—and by learning a little here and a little there, and teaching a little here and a little there to allow the normal processes of truth to keep growing for the well-being of our fellow men. In our search and in our teaching we are a part of a great adventure—an exciting adventure—which gives to us a larger satisfaction even than did the adventure of settling the Americas give to our Founding Fathers. We feel that we are building human progress by conquering disease and poverty and discomfort, and by improving science and culture, removing one by one the cruelty, the crudity and the barbarism of less civilized eras.

Minds Regimented

In contrast, in other parts of the world, teachers and scholars are not permitted to search for truth lest the truth when made known might not suit the designs of their masters. Too often they are not allowed to teach the truth as they see it, for truth might make men free. They become objects of suspicion if they speak openly, if they show an interest in new truth, for their very tongues and minds are supposed to be mobilized for other ends.

This has not happened in the New World. God willing, it shall not happen in the New World.

At the Pan American Conference at Buenos Aires, and again at Lima, we discussed a dim and unpleasant possibility. We feared that other continents might become so involved in wars brought on by the school of destruction that the Americas might have to become the guardian of Western culture, the protector of Christian civilization.

In these days it was merely a fear. Today the fear has become a fact.

A Legacy to Guard

The inheritance which we had hoped to share with every nation in the world is, for the moment, left largely in our keeping: and it is our compelling duty to guard and enrich that legacy, to preserve it for a world which must be reborn from the ashes of the present disaster.

Today we known that until recent weeks too many citizens of the American republics believed themselves wholly safe—physically, and economically and socially—from the impact of the attacks on civilization which are in progress elsewhere. Perhaps this mistaken idea was based on the false teaching of geography—the thought that a distance of several thousand miles from a war-torn Europe gave to us some form of mystic immunity which could never be violated.

Yet, speaking in terms of timetables, in terms of the moving of men and guns and planes and bombs, every acre—every hectare—of the Americas from the Arctic to the Antarctic is closer to the homes of modern conquerors and the scenes of attacks in Europe than was the case in historic efforts to dominate the world in by-gone centuries. From the point of view of conquests, it is a shorter distance from the center of Europe to Santiago de Chile than it was for the chariots of Alexander to roll from Macedonia to Persia. In modern terms it is a shorter distance from Europe to San Francisco than it was for the ships and legions of Caesar to move from Rome to Spain or Britain. Today it is four or five hours from the continent of Africa to the continent of South America, where it was four or five weeks for the armies of Napoleon to move from Paris to Rome or Paris to Poland.

Inventions Misused

You who are scientists may be told that you are responsible because of the processes of invention for the annihilation of time and space, but I assure you that it is not the scientists of the world who are responsible, because the objectives which you have had have looked toward closer and more peaceful relations between all nations through the spirit of cooperation and the interchange of knowledge. What has come about has been caused solely by those who would use, and are using, your inventions of peace in a wholly different cause—those who seek to dominate hundreds of millions of people in vast continental areas—those who, if successful in that aim will, we must now admit, enlarge their wild dream to encompass every human being and every mile of the earth's surface.

The great achievements of science and even of art can be used to destroy as well as create; they are only instruments by which men try to do the things they most want to do. If death is desired, science can do that. If a full life is sought, science can do that also. Happily for us that question is solved—for in the New World we live for each other and in the service of a Christian faith.

Issue for Americas

Is this solution—our solution—permanent or safe if it is solved for us alone? That it seems to me is the most immediate issue that the Americas face. Can we continue our peaceful construction if all the other continents embrace by preference or by compulsion a wholly different principle of life?

Surely it is time for our republics to spread that problem before us in the cold light of day, to analyze it, to ask questions, to demand answers, to use every knowledge, every sicence we possess, to apply common sense, and especially to act with unanimity and singleness of purpose.

I am a pacifist. You, my fellow citizens of 21 American republics, are pacifists.

But I believe that by overwhelming majorities you and I, in the long run and if it be necessary, will act together to protect and defend by every means our science, our culture, our freedom and our civilization.

Senate Unit's Report Favors CAA Transfer

Resolution Blocking Plan Is Opposed, 5-3; McCarran 'Confident'

By John B. Oakes

Senate consideration of the President's plan to shake up the Civil Aeronautics Authority was assured yesterday when the Committee on Government Organization voted to report out adversely the McCarran resolution blocking the proposed transfer.

At the end of two-day hearings, the committee opposed by a 5-to-3 vote McCarran's effort to thwart the projected CAA reorganization but permitted the whole matter to be brought to the Senate floor.

Proclaiming his "confidence" in victory, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, declared immediately after the committee vote that he would call up his resolution Monday. Debate will begin at once and will not exceed 10 hours. The vote is expected to be exceedingly close.

Hinckley Testifies

At yesterday's hearings on the reorganization plan, which would abolish the Air Safety Board and transfer the CAA to the Commerce Department, CAA Chairman Robert H. Hinckley said the proposal "can actually increase the safety of the traveling public and improve conditions generally in the industry."

Darrell T. Lane, former counsel for the Air Safety Board, said he thought the plan wouldn't make "one bit of difference;" but the two members of the endangered board, Chairman Thomas Hardin and C. B. Allen, voiced disapproval of the projected reorganization.

Senators Barkley, of Kentucky; Byrnes, of South Carolina; Harrison, of Mississippi, and Senator Lucas, of Illinois, (Democrats), and LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, voted "aye;" while Senators McNary, of Oregon, and Townsend, of Delaware (Republicans), and Byrd, of Virginia (Democrat), voted against the unfavorable report. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, was absent and left no proxy.

Safety Board Praised

Decision to report out the resolution at all was interpreted in some quarters as a reflection of Administration belief that it has enough Senate votes to sustain the President. The committee had the other alternatives of tabling the resolution or reporting it out favorably; but if it had been tabled, Senator McCarran would have offered a discharge motion next week.

In very restrained fashion, Chairman Hinckley indicated his approval of the Presidential reorganization order; but he also gave high praise to the Air Safety Board.

While declaring that the CAA would not be impaired "in any way" by reorganization, Hinckley asserted that the board had made "a real contribution" to civil aviation, and had set "a very necessary pattern" for investigating crashes. This pattern, said the chairman, would be followed in the future.

The dissension that wracked the Air Safety Board was "practically created" by the very terms of the act setting up the CAA, Hinckley declared as he paid warm tribute to the CAA personnel and members of the board for their "devotion" to aviation.

U. S. Order to Mean Pay Rise For 200,000 Apparel Workers

Philip B. Fleming, wage-hour administrator, announced approval yesterday of a minimum wage order for the apparel industry, which he estimated would result in pay increases for 200,000 garment workers, and add $10,000,000 yearly to the industry's pay roll.

Based on recommendations made by the industry, the order contains minimum wage rates ranging from 32½ to 40 cents an hour for 26 divisions. It becomes effective July 15, and brings increases to the largest number of workers to be benefited by an industrial wage order under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

"The apparel wage order," said Col. Fleming, "will have more widespread effect than any yet issued by the division . . . from now on, economies effected by the industry will not be accomplished by cutting wages."

No Price Rise Seen

He added that he did not believe the establishment of the minimum wage rates would materially affect clothing prices.

Replying to a query as to the wage-hour division's position concerning the status of employes of private carriers by motor vehicles, Fleming said the Interstate Commerce Commission had just issued an order prescribing hours of service regulations for drivers of such carriers to become effective August 1.

He said the wage-hour division would take no action with respect to past violations of the overtime provisions, but the question would be left to the retroactive action of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Grange Chief Asks Survey Of Farm Loans

Taber Is Witness Against Measure Of Jones, Wheeler

By Hedley Donovan.
Post Staff Writer

Creation of a commission of farm and banking representatives and political leaders to carry out a thorough survey of the country's farm credit systems was proposed yesterday by Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange.

Taber, testifying before a Senate Banking subcommittee in opposition to the Jones-Wheeler bill, urged Congress to enact no "revolutionary" legislation until the entire farm loan setup has been subjected to careful study. The inquiry should last at least a year, he said.

Emphatic support for the bill was expressed by another farm spokesman, M. F. Dickinson, representing the legislative committee of the National Farmers Union and the National Federation of Grain Cooperatives.

Reduced Rates Urged

Dickinson, who said he spoke for 350,000 farm families in 25 States, told the committee that because of present farm prices and the future outlook "farmers cannot be expected to pay more than 3 per cent interest." The Jones-Wheeler bill reduces farm loan interest rates, now 3½ and 4 per cent, to 3 per cent.

He defended vigorously the section of the bill providing for automatic scaledown of indebtedness whenever a farmer can prove that his indebtedness exceeds the productive value of his land.

"Industry has written off its losses, along with the private lending agencies, insurance companies, investment bankers and others," he said, "and we feel it would only be good business for the Land Bank System to do the same thing."

Assails Present Plans

Dickinson assailed the testimony of previous witnesses who have contended that the cooperative features of the farm credit system would be destroyed by the bill's provision for Government guarantee of the Land Bank bonds and abolition of the present arrangement by which borrowers take 5 per cent of their loans in Land Bank stock.

"This bill does not destroy any great cooperative system," he asserted, "because you can't destroy something that has never existed. The Federal Land Banks are not farmer-owned, since at the present time the farmers own $109,000,000 of the stock, while the Government owns $125,000,000. The system is not farmer-controlled because the farmer-borrowers have no direct place in the formulation of policies."

Dickinson called the requirements that borrowers take capital stock in the land banks a "shakedown" and "hangover" from days before the Federal farm credit system was set up, when the agent took 5 per cent of the loan as his commission.

Taber insisted that the Jones-Wheeler bill would "cripple and destroy" the farm loan system and subject it to political domination.

The measure "proposes to make the rural credit system an instrument of the political party which happens to be in power at any time," he asserted.

Taber said the present system "has successfully weathered World Wars, postwar booms and periods of world-wide financial and economic collapse."

Store Head Fined $500 For Short-Weight Sales

Fines totaling $500 were levied against Luther W. High, president of the High Ice Cream Co., yesterday by Police Court Judge John P. McMahon on 10 informations charging short weight sales of chickens in 10 High stores. High pleaded guilty to the informations, each of which contained four specific counts, April 25, when the cases first were called into court.

High explained that the poultry was obtained from a hennery and the packages were weighed and stamped on the farm. The High stores had no scales, inspectors testified. Judge McMahon fined High $50 on the first count in each of the 10 informations.

Squatter Cleared in Slaying, Goes Back to See Garden

Edwin E. Greene, 55-year-old squatter, last night was back on "his land" in shanty row, a dejected strip of weeds and water along the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal above Key Bridge, freed by a coroner's jury of the fatal shooting of James Walsh, 48, also a squatter.

The jury decided the middle-aged nester "shot in defense of his life," Wednesday, when he fired a shotgun into Walsh's chest.

The verdict released Greene from custody, and he headed directly toward his riverside shack "to see about my garden."

Greene sat through the hearing unperturbed and at the end when he was asked if he wanted to take the stand told Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald "these people have told the story better than I could tell it."

Detective Sergt. Dewey Guest, of the homicide squad and principal witness, told the jury Greene's story and those of several other of the lowland dwellers.

He said he was told Walsh had terrorized the residents of the strip with threats that he intended to run them away and burn their shacks. Walsh, Guest said, apparently set fire to two shacks about 200 yards from Greene's place Wednesday before appearing at the defendant's place.

"Witnesses told me," Guest added, "that Walsh was warned several times by Greene not to come on his land, but the victim paid no heed. When he came down the bank from the railroad tracks, Greene fired from the hip with a 28-gauge shotgun.

Gave Himself Up

Greene was waiting near his shanty when police arrived and gave himself up with the statement, "I'm your man," it was testified. He admitted shooting Walsh, but said he fired only when Walsh made a motion toward his pocket and "pulled out something that looked like a gun."

The defendant told Coroner MacDonald after the hearing that he has been going "up the canal" since he was 9 when his grandfather took him there. He said Nathaniel Greene was a direct ancestor.

"My full name," he declared, "is Edwin Edward Price Martindale Greene."

Following the incident that led to yesterday's inquest neighbors in "squatters' row," jungle-like strip of land between the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and the Potomac above Key Bridge, had told the story of 10 years of murder, arson and robbery among a drifters' population, living there under sufferance of the Federal Government.

The fatal shooting of Walsh, 50-year-old unemployed steam fitter, was only one episode in a long tale of violence.

A Place of Feuds

From Mrs. Grace Schaffer, an acquaintance of Greene's, who lives in a beached houseboat a half-mile away, came a significant commentary on conditions that have made "squatters' row"—semi-isolated from police supervision by unbridged water on either side—a place of bitter feuding and precarious existence.

"Already they've stolen all Mr. Greene's belongings, his poultry, and fish," she said on Thursday.

She explained the man in custody had sent word to her to keep for him his half-dozen chickens and ducks, and two casks of preserved fish. She walked to his one-room shack in midafternoon to see two men walking away with the property.

Mrs. Schaffer, who came to live in her houseboat with three children only two months ago, was mystified by the "property rights" issue of the fatal dispute.

Escaped Convict Faces Maryland Attack Charge

A school bus driver chased an escaped colored convict into the arms of Prince Georges County police near Hall, Md., yesterday after posses of farmers and police had failed to find him in more than 24 hours.

The escaped convict, Alex Williams, was wanted on charges of beating a 22-year-old woman, mother of three children, and dragging her from her home into the nearby woods. She identified a photograph of the convict, who escaped from a road gang near Crownsville Wednesday, as her attacker.

William Hopkins, 27, son of former Hall Sheriff W. Curtis Hopkins, recognized him outside Hall and notified Ann Arundel and Prince Georges County police.

A school bus driver, Eugene Sweeney, saw Williams and chased him into some woods off Central avenue. Williams outran his pursuer, circled, and returned to the road just as Prince Georges County police officers Turner and Dent arrived.

Roosevelt Backs Red Cross Appeal for War Relief Fund

Davis Expects Great Misery For Civilians

Agency of Mercy Calls on Nation To Help Sufferers

President Roosevelt yesterday urged all Americans with sympathy for "the peoples of those unfortunate countries" suffering "the horrors of invasion and aerial bombardment" to respond "quickly and generously" to the American Red Cross appeal for a $10,000,000 war relief fund.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is national head of the agency, issued this statement:

"The American Red Cross has issued an appeal for a war-relief fund of at least $10,000,000.

"I urge all Americans who have a feeling of deep sympathy for the peoples of those unfortunate countries who today have been added to the long list of those who are suffering the horrors of invasion and aerial bomberdment, to respond quickly and generously to this appeal.

"The American Red Cross, our official national volunteer relief agency, is efficiently organized to answer such emergency calls.

"It is, therefore, the logical agency through which our citizens can express their compassion for the innocent victims of the wars that rage overseas. I am confident we will not fail them."

"The hour has struck," stated Norman H. Davis, the chairman, in announcing the organization was taking advantage of authority voted Wednesday to issue a call for a war relief fund, "if and when necessary."

The moment holds, Davis said, "a threat of ensuing suffering and horror to be endured by women and children and the aged such as human mind never has conceived."

At the same time the Red Cross chairman sent cablegrams of sympathy to the Red Cross societies of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. These read:

"In this tragic moment the American Red Cross offers its assistance to its sister society. Please cable how best we can aid."

Funds for the aid of Norwegian war victims will be raised by the Norwegian Society of Washington with a benefit at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, at 8:30 p. m. May 17. The Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, is expected to speak.

Batavia, May 10 (AP).—The Netherlands East Indies, richest Dutch colonial possession, were placed under martial law today by Governor-General Tjarda van Starckenborgh Stachouwer, who proclaimed the Indies to be at war with Germany and warned other nations that any offer of help would be unwelcome.

This was interpreted as a reference to an official Japanese statement of concern on April 15 over the status of the Indies if the Netherlands were to be involved in the European war.

[In Tokyo today, foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma, said Japan was "maintaining a policy of strict noninvolvement," and had no reason to believe the situation of the Indies would be affected by Germany's invasion of the Netherlands.]

The Washington Youth Council yesterday announced it had sent a letter to President Roosevelt urging his support of the Lee-Randolph bill for adult civic education forums. The bill was described as "of fundamental importance to the development of an informed and intelligent electorate."

'Total War' After Its First Day

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Yesterday's blitzkrieg of Nazi forces into The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg was unprecedented in history. Black arrows on this map indicate location and direction of many German thrusts by land, which accompanied parachuting of troops at many points and widespread air bombing. Nazi symbols show cities subjected to bombing and parachute troops attacks. White arrows indicate Dutch and Allied defense moves. Major battle of the day was at Rotterdam, with the Dutch offering strong resistance. Nazis claimed capture of Maastricht and Malmedy. Dutch reports said British troops had landed at several points on The Netherlands coast, with British detachments passing through Amsterdam. Germans claimed Luxembourg went into Nazi hands with virtually no resistance, but French reports said Allied forces had engaged the invaders inside the little duchy. Inset map (top left corner) shows Aruba Island in the Dutch West Indies where 150 French marines, from the cruiser Jeanne D'Arc, landed last night, fully equipped. Also shown is the Island Curacao, where, according to reports received in Washington, the British may land troops of Utah, and Thomas, of Oklahoma, proposed extension of credits to the Allies, while Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, declared this Government should immediately "render the Allies every possible assistance short of sending an expeditionary force abroad."

Capitol Hill Feels Invasion Proves Need of More Defenses

The fiery Virginian said that "Germany ought to be wiped off the face of this earth."

All statements stopped short of actual American war involvement, and suggestions of Johnson Act credit ban repeal brought some sharp protests. Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, said the Allies already have adequate dollar credit and manpower and opposed any relaxation of Johnson and Neutrality Act credit restrictions. Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, predicted no action will be taken this session on credit extension.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, generally isolationist in his views, said he favored all aid that is now being extended the Allies, but said credit advances may well be considered at some future date. Capper reiterated his stand for noninvolvement.

Chairman Carl Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, meanwhile pushed forward plans for a thoroughgoing survey of warship building and fleet aviation plans to assure American ocean dominance, with hearings starting next week.

Chairman Thomas, of the Senate Army Appropriations subcommittee, revealed that he had given carte blanche permission to War Department witnesses to state Army needs regardless of their conflict with the budget.

When witnesses appeared "hesitant," he said he asked Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, to prepare "confidential" statements of War Department needs. He said the department was revising these yesterday and his subcommittee will carry them to the White House if necessary to get Budget Bureau estimates required by the House.

Thomas said he believed his subcommittee to a man favored providing funds at once to equip modernly an initial protective force of 450,000 Army and National Guardsmen.

"We couldn't put a fully equipped Army of more than 75,000 in the field today," said Thomas. "We haven't any Army we could call such. We are going to build it up anyway, and why not do it now, when we can buy needed materials more cheaply and have an Army ready for any emergency."

It has been estimated that $40,000,000 more than is provided in the budget would equip the force, the combined man power of which is now around the 450,000 goal. The next move will be for funds to provide essential equipment for a 1,000,000-man war-strength Army.

It was reported that the department will recommend that the President ask Congress for funds for 200 long-range, $400,000 four-motor bombing planes, to bulwark Western Hemisphere defenses. Some subcommitteemen are urging extension of airplane pilot training and additional provision for planes.

British and French orders of American fighting planes of all types meanwhile were reported to have been increased by 2,000 or more in the last few weeks, swelling Allied military plane orders here to around 4,000 in the last month.

Senator Pittman, in an address last night before the Inquirendo Club at the Mayflower, asserted: "Our Constitution and our institutions will live on. This country will never be conquered."

Pittman said he hoped "the British and the French governments at last understand the true character of Hitler and his determined purposes." The Foreign Relations chairman said it should have been realized years ago that "Hitler is a conqueror, imbued with a fanatical determination to make the German race dominant throughout the world."

Humane, democratic restraints, he said, have caused England and France "to be a step behind always in the war with Hitler."

pation of the landing ground the enemy had no time in which to establish antiaircraft defense.

"The only ground opposition came from the guns of stationary aircraft and was ineffective. Enemy fighters, however, were active in force and a number of combats took place.

"Attacks on Rotterdam's former civil airport of Waalhaven began shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday afternoon. Airport hangars, presumably set fire by the Dutch before evacuation, were already ablaze when British bombers arrived over the airdrome.

50 Transports Dispersed

"Attacks were concentrated on large numbers of enemy aircraft, including 50 troop-carriers which were dispersed along the sides of the airdrome, and numerous direct hits were noticed until a pall of smoke over the airdrome from successive bombing attacks became so dense as to make observation impossible.

"Four enemy aircraft were destroyed in one dive bombing attack alone, numerous fires were started and heavy casualties were inflicted on enemy personnel. Ten enemy troop carriers which had disembarked troops on a beach about 8 miles north of The Hague also were attacked by British bombing forces in concert with long-range fighters.

"Flying low above the beach and firing with their front guns, British fighters first attacked the line of stationary aircraft with devastating effect. Bombers attacking from a higher level followed with an onslaught of salvos of high explosive bombs.

"One salvo, bursting 20 feet from a transport, was seen to lift the great three-engined machine bodily from the ground and as it fell back it burst into flames.

"When the raiding force withdrew two enemy aircraft could be seen half submerged in water, two more were in flames and the remainder were riddled by bullets and bomb splinters."

British Move Fast

The British moved swiftly. Not until this morning had Holland asked for Allied help; indeed, she openly refused to accept any advance promises of aid from anyone.

[Yet, even last autumn, persons in the know in Amsterdam had it that 25,000 British troops were held ready on the British east coast, ready to move at a moment's notice across the North Sea and into Holland to help defend her from invasion. That invasion came at dawn Friday, after repeated and well-founded alarms.]

Tonight the fighting in Rotterdam, opulent Netherlands seaport, grew in intensity as the Germans flew in reinforcements to their hard-pressed shock units.

The Dutch also rushed to strengthen their forces battling to wipe out this strong but small Nazi force, confined to the left (south) side of the River Nieuwe Maas.

The Germans were driven out of their control of the big bridge across the river connecting the two parts of the city. But they continue to occupy the Maas Hotel, their headquarters, after extinguishing a fire started by Dutch incendiary shells.

Capital Bombed

The Nazis tonight bombed The Hague, governmental seat of the invaded nation, one explosive falling close to United States Minister George A. Gordon. There were numerous air alarms all evening at half hourly intervals.

One German transport plane carrying 19 soldiers plunged through the roof of a house in The Hague when the Dutch shot it down. The soldiers all wore Netherlands uniforms.

The Germans succeeded in landing troops at two small landing fields near The Hague, and gained control of them. They were at Okkenburg and Ypenburg. But the small German units were immediately surrounded.

Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, the Dutch commander in chief, in the name of Queen Wilhelmina thanked the troops tonight and declared: "The surprise attack of the enemy can be considered a failure."

From the narrow Ems channel on the northeast to the tip of Limburg and west across the country to Rotterdam, invaded by seaplanes and parachute platoons, the green-uniformed armies of the Queen contested, inch by inch, with the enemy.

Tonight, while British and French planes droned high above Dutch canals to signalize assistance, Holland's high command drew this hopeful picture of the defense of the nation by an army of 400,000 men:

On the East: Four armored trains destroyed (one "blown to pieces" on the railroad bridge near border Venlo); first-line armies nolding their ground on the Maas and the Ijssel rivers; coastal defenders at Delfzijl, in extreme northeast Holland across the Ems from the German naval base of Emden, holding out against strong attack.

The interior: German troops, landed by seaplane and parachute, attacked from all sides by Dutch defenders.

The air: Seventy German planes shot down.

There was every evidence that even the interior footholds gained by the invaders, behind the main flood water and land defenses of the central Netherlands, were won at tremendous cost.

The most dramatic invasion and the most spectacular fighting of all was in the heart of Rotterdam.

There, where the terrifying roar of hundreds of planes sent virtually all the population of 600,000 into the streets at 4 o'clock in the morning, the Germans managed to land great troop transport planes in the middle of the Nieuwe Maas River, which cuts through the city, and put troops ashore in rubber boats. Other troops billowed down on the Waalhaven Airport to the south.

Battle in Streets

But tonight, fierce fighting proceeded in the streets of Rotterdam and the invaders, pounded with incendiary shells and counter attacked by waves of Dutch marines, were in a precarious position.

The Germans, armed only with machine guns and rifles, were confined almost entirely to the left bank of the river. These troops were completely encircled and 40 had been captured.

Maas Station, on the right bank of the river above the bridge, was captured early in the day by Germans who shot down its few policemen defenders, but it appeared the Germans had been driven out.

Meanwhile, at Schiphol Airdrome, at the south edge of Amsterdam, Holland's capital and largest city of some 800,000, 15 persons were injured in heavy bombings which began at dawn and lasted all day.

The city, with a ringside seat for this action, was not attacked.

At The Hague, from which Queen Wilhemina issued a "flaming protest" against the invaders and called on her army to fight, German leaflets showered down this afternoon, asserting the city was surrounded and that resistance was "insane."

There was nothing to indicate this was true.

The Netherlands fought back with both fire and water.

Sluices in the main water line running south from the Zuider Zee (Ijsselmeer) were opened wide to complete the shallow flood water defenses that are intended to save western Holland and its rich cities from an invading army coming by land from Germany.

Further east, where strategic points in the first defense line above and below the Rhine were flooded last fall, the Dutch troops blew up bridges across the Maas and the Ijssel rivers.

The exact position of the German troops on the east was in question, but it was assumed they were somewhere in the vicinity of Arnhem, in east-central Netherlands, and southward in Limburg Province.

Warn Against Trickery

[The Germans claimed they had cut clear across South Limburg Province, which hangs down like a watch fob and shields Belgium from Germany.]

On the home front the Netherlands was deep in strict wartime conditions. Blackouts were enforced tonight in all large cities; amusement places were closed; telephone service in Amsterdam and elsewhere was restricted to vital business; all Germans were confined to their homes; Dutch Nazi and Communist papers were suppressed.

For air-raid protection, cities like Amsterdam and The Hague have strongly reinforced air-raid shelters, built above the ground because of the watery nature of the soil.

Posters carried an appeal from Premier Derek Jan de Geer for courage and calmness. Civilians were warned to stay at home if the enemy approaches, to refrain from the use of arms, "as this might cause damage or provoke counter-measures."

Air defense units were told to regard the French, British and Dutch planes over the country as "those of our Allies."

On the other hand, the Dutch charged officially that some of the German parachutists were dressed in Netherlands uniforms and that, in some cases, Dutch prisoners were used as shields for the attacking Germans.

Remembering Norway and Poland, the general headquarters also told the army and people that "the government never will negotiate with the German enemy" and warned against false radio reports and pamphlets intended to stop Dutch resistance.

failed to obtain their first objective and failed to gain the initial success they expected," Denis told the House.

Then, referring to the Belgian appeal for Allied assistance which was followed six hours later by arrival of the British and French officers, he said:

"Our soldiers are comforted in knowing that our friends are coming to their aid."

Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak earlier in the day handed German Ambassador von Bulow-Schwante a note declaring Belgium would "defend herself with all means . . . and cannot be vanquished."

Defiance Offered to Nazis

"I am convinced we shall win, but sorry that I have to live through this moment."

Premier Hubert Pierlot told the deputies that King Leopold had expected to address them but that he, like his father, King Albert in 1914, had taken over command of all the armed forces and was in the front lines.

The premier asked for a national unity, but said the government would request no additional powers at present.

"There will be no peace until the unity of the country is recognized," he said.

The chamber adjourned after a vote of 154 to 1 in favor of the government measures.

After this morning's raid on Brussels, in which two children were killed and 50 persons were wounded while one bomb struck close to the United States embassy, there were several air raid alarms and once antiaircraft fire could be heard in Brussels.

Twenty-seven German planes were reported over the province of Limbourg, adjoining the Netherlands frontier, and later nine more over Herenthals, 20 miles east of Antwerp, and others over Gembloux, 28 miles southeast of Brussels.

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of the British and French armies, proclaimed to his forces that Germany had begun "a fight to the death against us."

In his order of the day he said: "The attack which we have foreseen since last October was launched this morning.

"Germany has begun a fight to the death against us.

"The orders are, for France and her Allies: Courage, energy, confidence."

British Moving Up

With The British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, May 10 (AP).—British troops crossed the Belgian frontier today and are pressing forward to a new battle front.

Since the frontier barriers were lowered this morning, the khaki-clad columns have been moving smoothly and steadily toward the east.

Crowds of civilians pelted the singing soldiers with flowers and ran beside troop-filled lorries offering the soldiers bottles of beer.

Long columns of trucks of all sizes, tanks, armored cars, staff autos and motorcycles moved across the frontier in a steady stream.

Many vehicles in the long column bore names, often of famous race horses. One tank was christened "Old Bill" after a cartoon character of the last war.

Some of the troops entered Belgium with wild whoops. A sergeant shouted "We are the boys."

Speedy motorcyclists constantly rode along beside the column, keeping the units moving steadily. The column didn't halt, and there was no end of it in sight.

Son of a Soldier

James Samuel Trotter, interned flier freed in Brussels, is one of two sons of Alexander Trotter, who came to Virginia from England nearly a half-century ago. He married Miss Cameron Browning, of Pocohontas, W. Va., and the couple built an impressive home on University Circle in Charlottesville, where James Trotter was born 30 years ago.

Alexander Trotter was killed in France in July, 1916, and Mrs. Trotter died at Charlottesville nine years ago. After her death, both of her sons left Charlottesville, and the home was sold. It was reported in Charlottesville that James Trotter had been seen in New York about six months ago.

The British government "publicly proclaimed that they reserve to themselves the right to take any action which they consider appropriate in event of bombings of civil populations" by Germany.

A similar announcement was issued by the French government in Paris.

British Proclamation

Britain's proclamation followed a reported bombing of Chilham in rural Kent, 40 miles southeast of London, and raids on various towns in the Netherlands and Belgium. It follows:

"His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom, who, in their reply of September 1 to the appeal of the President of the United States, gave assurance that their air forces had received orders prohibiting the bombing of civilian populations in limiting bombings to strictly military objectives, now publicly proclaim that they reserve to themselves the right to take any acton which they consider appropriate in the event of bombing by the enemy of civil populations whether in the United Kingdom, France or in countries assisted by the United Kingdom."

French Homes Bombed

Somewhere in France, May 10 (AP). I have just seen the scattered remains of three private homes where two civilians were blown to bits and another gravely injured by Germany's first great aerial onslaught on France.

Plowing through the debris on the outskirts of this village I suddenly came upon a jagged piece of bone and flesh wedged against a wall.

"Her thigh," said one of the military officers who was conducting me.

Malca Leon, young and pretty, was engaged to be married. They picked up her remains in a sack after the German planes went over at dawn today.

No Military Objectives

Four planes dropped 24 bombs, according to the officer. When I asked him if there were any military objectives in the neighborhood, he replied with an emphatic "none whatever."

"Then why?" I inquired.

His explanation was that the Nazi aviators, growing nervous, must have wished to lighten their loads to facilitate their escape after being caught in a curtain of antiaircraft fire.

Direct hits were scored on two of the three houses which stood in a row along the side of the road. The scene was reminiscent of the destruction a Midwestern tornado leaves behind.

Direct Hits on Two Houses

Direct hits were on the two end houses, killing one person in each. In the center house Mme. Pauline Bluteau and her seven children escaped unhurt, though all the windows were smashed.

The other person killed was Gilbert Vasseur. The injured was Jean Gourot, future father-in-law of Mlle. Leon. He was taken to a hospital.

The area about the houses looked like a miniature battlefield. Soldiers were prodding the craters for pieces of the bombs, while a crowd of spectators looked on. Out in back, by the side of the onion patch, a flock of chickens clucked and pecked, with not a feather out of place.

Dutch Towns Bombed

The Hague, May 10 (AP).—Many small towns in south Holland were bombed tonight. A number of houses were destroyed at Tilburg and several civilians killed or wounded; in the village of Etta, near Breda, all windows in the place were broken and the roof torn off the church.

War in North Eases Tension In Balkans

Hope to Remain At Peace Even if Italy Draws Sword

By Edward W. Beattie, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, May 10.—The violent outbreak of war in northwestern Europe substantially eased tension in the Balkans—themselves fearful of being made a battleground—but southeastern Europe remained distinctly on the alert.

There was increasing hope that peace might be maintained in this region and that the great powers may settle their differences elsewhere.

Well-informed Yugoslavs pointed out that their country's official attitude would, of course, depend greatly on Italy's future moves but they now considered it possible that even Italy's entrance in the war on the side of Germany might not affect Yugoslavia.

The jittery Balkans, however, believe that the Allies yet may put pressure on southeastern Europe if they should meet reverses in the west in view of the strong concentration of Allied forces around the Mediterranean basin. But they are hopeful that the major test of strength in the west will draw the attention and the armed forces of the belligerents away from the Balkans.

An example of the ticklish situation in which neutrals find themselves came today from the German Legation. The Reich submitted to Foreign Minister Gafencu copies of today's Rumanian newspapers with comments concerning their headlines and editorials. One paper, Ramonia, was known to have received a communication from the German Legation stating that its contents were prejudicial to Germany and expressing the hope the newspaper would maintain a neutral attitude in the future.

In Budapest, the first official Hungarian reaction to the new war front was one of sympathy for Germany, but newspapers were sympathetic with the peoples of the invaded countries and there was a measure of popular relief in the belief the Balkans have received a reprieve from war.

Names of the White House Visitors Look Like an International Casualty List

Low Countries' Envoys Call On President

Danish Minister Also Drops In; Luxembourg Aide Sees Hull

President Roosevelt, deep in study of the latest extension of Europe's war, was primed with information yesterday on the official attitude of Belgium and the Netherland following emergency White House calls from the envoys of those invaded countries.

The President's calling list took on the appearance of an international casualty list, as four diplomats from attacked countries called in rapid succession.

The callers and their disclosures:

Dr. A. Loudon, the Netherlands Minister, dapper despite the fact his country had been invaded for the first time in more than a century, told reporters only that his talk with the President was "very agreeable," and then hurried to the Treasury for a secret conference. Loudoun was named world paymaster this week for the Dutch government in case of war.

Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, Belgian Ambassador, and George Theunis, former Belgian premier and suddenly chief war buyer here for Belgium, found the President "very interested" in the Low Countries because, the President said, his grandfather was of old New York Dutch and his grandmother a Belgian from Ghent. Theunis, his eyes flashing, shouted to reporters that "the last Belgian soldier will be dead" before the nation accepts German "protection." He added that "only a fool or a madman would think of invading Belgium as Belgium is now fortified."

Henrik de Kauffman, Danish Minister, presented to President Roosevelt a resolution adopted by the United Greenland Councils (parliament), thanking the United States and its citizezns for its "sympathy."

Meanwhile other embassy staffs adjusted their national policies to the new events.

"A Figure of Speech"

So tense was Heribert von Strempel, first secretary of the German Embassy that he inadvertently compared Germany's government to a "gangster."

Explaining to a reporter that neutrals like the Low Countries are in constant danger, von Strempel said:

"Holland was like an innocent bystander in between two gangsters, Germany and Great Britain."

Quickly the diplomat corrected himself, however, explaining that he did not mean to characterize the Nazi regime or the British government as of the "gangster" type. "It was only a figure of speech," he said.

Von Strempel said the German invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands was "perfectly logical," in view of the fact that England "would probably have wanted to invade them to make up for the disastrous defeat in Norway."

Earlier in the day Dr. Loudon, in a radio speech broadcast by N. B. C., said for the Dutch government:

"Seldom has there been in history a more unwarranted violation of good faith on the part of any nation and a more brutal attack in all that is decent in the relations between cultured states.'

"The Netherlands are resisting this attack to the fullest extent of their power."

Over the same network yesterday morning the Belgian Ambassador declared:

"For the second time in a quarter of a century my country is the victim of a brutal aggression."

He recalled that Germany on October 13, 1937, pledged "to respect at all times the Belgian soil, except, needless to say, in case Belgium, in an armed conflict where Germany would be engaged, would concur in a military action against her."

The Dutch and Belgian envoys and Hugues Le Gallais, charge d'affaires of Luxembourg, called at the State Department separately during the day for conferences with high American officials.

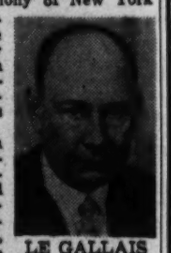
Luxembourg's Independence Day Blighted

Saddened Envoy Tells of Duchy's Token Resistance

Ironically, Hugh Le Gallais, Charge d'Affaires here for Luxembourg, was scheduled to join the Luxembourg colony of New York today in celebration of the 73d anniversary of the London Treaty, confirming the independence of his country.



LE GALLAIS

The German invasion of Luxembourg yesterday trampled out the plan, although Le Gallais commented, "at the beginning of the war the Germans had declared they would respect our territory."

Speaking of the blitzkrieg, Le Gallais' voice was steady and cold but his words were emotional. "The Charge d'Affaires is really sorry and deeply upset by the disastrous news of the invasion of his small and peaceful country," he said. It has only 300 police-soldiers, he reminded.

Sought to Delay Invader

Under its international status, it maintains no army as such, he pointed out "and therefore cannot defend itself."

However, he said, "the Grand Duchy built antitank defenses to block the roads and bridgeheads leading into the country in order to stop for some time the invader, who would have to blast the cement blocks before moving in."

This was done to show clearly, he went on, that Luxembourg would not be party to any invader.

"The Grand Duchy, deprived of fighting forces, wanted at least to put up a symbol of resistance," he stated, adding that he had received no direct information "regarding the sad events taking place" in his country.

Fears for Grand Duchess

He was "very much worried to know what has happened to her Royal Highness, the Grand Duchess, and to her family."

"Whatever is happening today, the Charge d'Affaires is hopeful of the reestablishment of the independence of Luxembourg," he said. Le Gallais took residence here at the Shoreham Hotel on April 3, reopening diplomatic relations dropped by the nation some years before because the slight affairs between the two countries did not warrant the cost of a legation in Washington.

Dutch Use Old Language Trick To Trap Germans

The Netherlands Legation yesterday recalled a simple but effective test used in the first World War to trip up Germans masquerading as Hollanders.

It was the pronunciation of the name of the Dutch town Scheveningen, a small resort near The Hague. The inhabitants say it somewhat like "sreffeningen," with almost a sibilant "s." The Germans, on the other hand, couldn't manage anything nearer than a hard "sh" sound.

The test always worked, a legation official said, and the spurious Dutchmen were promptly clapped in jail. It is expected that the test will be overworked in the next few days.

Don't Send Our Boys to War, Mothers Plead

Delegation Asks Congress to Guard U. S. Neutrality

A delegation of Washington, Maryland and Virginia mothers yesterday asked Congress for a Mother's Day gift.

"You have it in your power to give us the greatest gift any mother could want—the assurance that her children may live in peace and security," they said.

Led by Mrs. Clarence Heer, 119 North Fillmore street, Arlington, the group was met on the East Porch of the Capitol by Representatives John M. Coffee, of Washington; Lee E. Geyer, of California; William D. Byron, of Maryland, and Knute Hill, of Washington, all Democrats.

Broad assurances were given by Representative Coffee. He said he would do all in his power to keep this Nation from involvement.

The mothers, acting on behalf of the Mother's Day Peace Committee, with headquarters at 2327 Fifteenth street northwest, implied that sentiment is not enough for their day (May 12) this year.

Congress was asked to "pass no legislation which would allow loans or credits to the belligerents, no legislation which would allow any of our sons—whether they be in the Army, the Navy or the air force—to be sent to war."

The mothers urged instead the passage of legislation "which will give them jobs, educational opportunities, better health and housing and laws to protect civil liberties.

Many Nazi Agents Busy in Mexico. Daniels Reports

Austin, Tex., May 10 (AP).—Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, said in an interview today many Nazi agents were working in Mexico and that there was "talk that they are trying to worm their way" into the government.

Daniels was en route to report to Secretary Hull. He said the Mexican secretary of foreign affairs, Eduardo Hay, recently assured him "there is no danger in Mexico from Communists and reports that Communist and Nazi agents are working together are greatly exaggerated."

Commenting on the Senate note to stop silver purchases from Mexico, Daniels expressed the opinion such action would hurt the United States as well as Mexico.

"If it goes back to 23 cents the government will lose the revenue from the difference in price being paid by the United States."

Nazis Trying To Outflank Maginot Line

Reports in Berlin Sparse, but Claim Day Was Successful

By George Axelsson.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, May 10.—For the second time in little more than a quarter of a century the field gray columns of a German army have been set marching "nach Paris."

Obviously aiming to flank the Maginot Line, stabbing at the Allied armies from the rear, the Reich troops crossed the frontiers into the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, establishing contact with the enemy along what the official general headquarters communique terms a broad front.

Even before this, at the first gleam of dawn, Germany's mighty air armada was launched, probably for the first time at anything like its capacity scale, in assaults upon enemy territory, which now also included the Lowlands.

Headquarters Reticent

German headquarters have chosen to reveal but little concerning the results of the first day of this "major war" upon the outcome of which hangs Europe's destiny. From scanty official information so far available, however, observers feel justified in thinking that the procedure successfully used in the Polish campaign once more is being followed.

This procedure calls for massive air attacks against enemy airfields, communications systems, and spearhead thrusts by a profusion of tanks, thus opening the way for motorized infantry and artillery units. In addition to this, such spectacular, yet unproven, novelties of warfare as parachutists dropped far behind the enemy lines, will be used to further the enemy military organization and defense.

To what extent this method of modern super-blitzkrieg met with success in the first day, one must wait for disclosures, for German headquarters is making no extravagant claims, merely stating that "enemy resistance in the proximity of the frontier, has everywhere been broken by our furious attacks; sometimes with the cooperation of our air force."

Successes Reported

From news released in unofficial sources, it seems that the German air force had a good day, preliminary reports claiming several successes, the outstanding of which is the alleged occupation of several Belgio-Dutch air fields, in addition to intense bombardments of those at Brussels, and Antwerp, where hangars and planes are said to have been fired by incendiary bombs.

[The Dutch claim recapture of all but one of the air fields.]

A series of raids against French air bases are claimed to have caused "lasting damage" to flying fields at Metz, Saint-Omer, Vitry-le-Francois, "speedboat" having, during the in addition to lesser damage elsewhere.

Today's official communique significantly refers to a German "speedboat" having, during the course of operations in the North Sea, torpedoed an enemy destroyer. These so-called speedboats are torpedo-carrying mosquito craft, originally taken up by the Italian navy. Going at above 50 knots, they have been called suicide shells because they carry a small crew and must get in so close to launch a torpedo as to make fairly good targets.

Used in Norway

Although used in the Norway campaign, this is the first time they have been spoken of as having destroyed a warship.

Another singular event in the day's naval news occurred off the Dutch island, Terschelling, where a German submarine is reported to have sunk a British submarine. The presence of speedboats and submarines in these waters suggests to some observers that both are being used to support attacks against the lowlands, laying mines and landing small obstructive groups at strategic points along the coasts. There are rumors of such groups having been landed in the Maas delta, but these are wholly unconfirmed.

As the German offensive across Belgium must mainly follow the 1914 tracks, with the Sombre and Meuse rivers bound to reappear in the day's news, some names reminiscent of the World War have already bobbed up in the communiques. A strong Belgian fort, reported to be one of the outer works of the Liege chain, is semiofficially alleged to have been captured by a German unit working in conjunction with the air force. According to the German news agency, a Capt. Koch and First Lieut. Witzig distinguished themselves in this action, drawing the Fuehrer's reward of the Knight's Insignia of the Iron Cross.

Berlin, May 10.—The thunderous impact of German total war descended upon western Europe today.

Adolf Hitler, proclaiming the start of a fight to "decide the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years," pushed his tremendous armies by land and air across the frontiers of Holland and Belgium and through the tiny Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

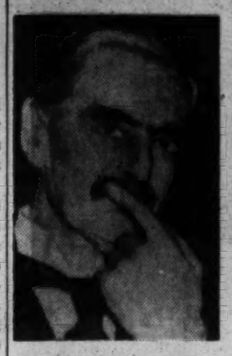
With Hitler at secret general headquarters "somewhere in the west," directing operations along a fighting front that now stretches 1,200 miles, from Basel on the Swiss frontier to Arctic Narvik,

Chamberlain Quits, Exhorting Realm to Crush 'Wild Beast'

By the Associated Press via Radio

London, May 10.—Neville Chamberlain, the symbol of "appeasement," said his valedictory today as prime minister, lifting his weary old voice in an appeal for support for his successor, Winston Churchill.

Speaking to the empire just after resigning a post which he had held through three years of mounting tragedy he told his countrymen:



CHAMBERLAIN

". . . You and I must now put all our strength behind the new government . . . and we must fight until this savage beast who has sprung out of his lair at us is finally overthrown."

"New and Drastic Action"

He recalled, in an international broadcast, the recent parliamentary crisis in which his leadership was but barely upheld after sharp and angry debate and added that after that he had "no doubt that some new and drastic action" must be taken to restore confidence.

"By today," he went on, "it was apparent that some unity could be attained under some other prime minister . . . my duty was plain. I saw His Majesty (to resign)."

He began with a somber declaration that "without warning or excuse" Adolf Hitler had "added another to the horrible crimes which already disgrace his name, by a sudden attack on Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

"In all history no other man has been responsible for such hideous total of human suffering and misery as he. He has chosen a moment when perhaps it seemed to him that this country was entangled in the throes of a political crisis and when he might find it divided against itself. If he has counted on our internal division to help him, he has miscalculated the mind of this people.

CHURCHILL

"I am not now going to make any comment upon the debate in the House of Commons which took place on Tuesday and Wednesday last but when it was over, I had no doubt in my mind that some new and drastic action must be taken if confidence was to be restored to the House of Commons and the war carried on with a vigor and energy which are essential to victory.

"What was that action to be? It was clear that at this critical moment in the war what was needed was the formation of a government which would include members of the Labor and Liberal oppositions and thus present a united front to the enemy.

Unity Essential

"What had to be ascertained was the conditions which would be necessary to enable such a united government to be formed, and to this question I devoted myself, with the assistance of some of my colleagues, yesterday afternoon.

"By the afternoon of today it was apparent that the essential unity could be secured under another prime minister, though not under myself. In those circumstances, my duty was plain. I sought an audience with the King this evening and tendered him my resignation which His Majesty has been pleased to accept.

His Majesty has now entrusted to my friend and colleague, Mr. Winston Churchill, the task of forming a new administration on a national basis, and in this task I have no doubt he will be successful.

Others Offer to Resign

"For that purpose, my other colleagues in the government have intimated to him that they will place their resignations in Mr. Churchill's hands, but they will of course retain their present offices pending the appointment of the new government.

"I should perhaps say, too, that Mr. Churchill has expressed to me his strong desire that I should be a member of the war cabinet, and I have told him that I will gladly give him any assistance that I can in that capacity.

"Now, as this is my last message to you from No. 10 Downing street, there are one or two things I should like to say to you.

A Heavy Load

"During the period—it is almost exactly three years—that I have been prime minister, I have borne a heavy load of anxiety and responsibility. As long as I believed there was any chance of preserving peace honorably, I strove to take it. When the last hope vanished and war could no longer be avoided, I strove equally hard to wage it with all my might.

"Perhaps you will remember that in my broadcast of September 3, last year, I told you that we should be fighting against evil things.

"My words have proved to be insufficient to describe the vileness of those who have now staked everything on the great battle just beginning.

"The Hour Has Come"

"Perhaps it may at least be some relief to know that this battle, though it may last for days or even weeks, has ended the period of waiting and uncertainty, for the hour has come when we are to be put to the test, as the innocent people of Holland and Belgium and France are being tested already.

"You and I must rally behind our new leader and with our united strength and with unshakable courage fight and work until this wild beast that has sprung out of his lair upon us be finally disarmed and overthrown."

Norway, the army tonight announced resistance on the Luxembourg-Belgian-Netherlands frontiers "broken everywhere in the first attack."

Within these frontiers, the high command said, the Germans smashed across Holland's "appendix" province of South Limburg, seized Dutch Maastricht and the vital Albert Canal bridges on the Belgian frontier; penetrated to the Ijssel River east of Arnhem in east central Holland; crossed the Maas River at several Dutch points; seized Malmedy, former German town in Belgium north of Luxembourg and crossed the Belgian frontier further south after moving through Luxembourg.

The Albert Canal is Belgium's great defense weapon and the Maastricht Bridgehead is an important key to it.

Ribbentrop Notes

Germany's invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg was documented by Hitler's "new Bismarck," Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, in notes to the three governments involved.

Because the Ruhr "nerve center" allegedly was to have been the avenue of an Allied attack through Belgium and Holland, it was argued that Germany had no choice but to safeguard the neutrality of these two countries and their Luxembourg neighbor with all the military measures at the disposal of the Reich.

Reich's Fate Up To You, Hitler Tells Soldiers

West Wall Order Calls War Nation's Struggle to Survive

By the Associated Press

London, May 10.—Adolf Hitler has addressed a message to his troops on the Western Front saying that "the hour has come for the most decisive struggle of the German people."

Hitler's order read:

Soldiers of the West Front!

The hour of the deciding fight for the future of the German nation has come.

For 300 years it was the aim of the English and French rulers to prevent every real consolidation of Europe, and, above all, to hold Germany in weakness and impotency.

For this purpose France alone has declared war on Germany 31 times in 200 years.

For decades it has been the aim of British world rulers to keep Germany from unity, to deny the Reich every earthly possession which is necessary to the preservation of a nation of 80,000,000 people.

England and France have carried through this policy of theirs without worrying about the regime which happened to rule in Germany at the time.

"To Live or Perish"

What they wanted to strike was always the German people.

Their responsible men admit this goal quite openly.

Germany shall be dashed to pieces and reduced to small states. With that the Reich will lose its political power and with it the possibility of securing for the German people their living rights on this earth.

For this reason all my peace overtures have been rejected and war was declared on us September 3 of last year.

The German people has no hatred, no inimical feeling toward the English or French people.

It stands, however, before the question whether it will live or perish.

In a few weeks the brave troops of our armies have crushed the Polish opponent pushed forward by England and France, thereby eliminating danger from the east.

Thereupon England and France decided to attack Germany from the north.

From April the German armed forces have nipped this attempt in the bud.

"The Hour Has Come"

Now what we have seen for many months as a threatening danger for us has happened. England and France are attempting, by employment of a gigantic maneuver of distraction in southeast Europe, to thrust forward into the Ruhr district over Holland and Belgium.

Soldiers of the West Front!

The hour for you has now come.

The fight beginning today decides the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years.

Do your duty now!

The German people, with its best wishes, is with you.

Hearst Predicts A Third Term

Los Angeles, May 10 (AP).—William Randolph Hearst predicts in the Examiner tonight that President Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation for a third term and "very possibly elected."

"Mor than that," the article continues, "he will, with the consent of a majority of the people, carry through changes in our Government and . . . If it (the President's program) is indorsed, we have created autocracy in place of democracy."

Line-up for World War No. 2

Here is how the European belligerents line up in land and air power:

	Men under arms.	First-line planes.
British Empire	2,300,000	6,000 (Britain and
France	6,000,000	France combined.
Netherlands	400,000	500
Belgium	600,000	500
Luxembourg	Unknown	Unknown
Germany (incl. conquered territories)	9,000,000	20,000 up

Italy, Germany's nonbelligerent Axis partner, with an area of 119,744 square miles and a population of 44,026,000, has 1,250,000 men under arms and an air force estimated at at least 10,000 war planes.

King Leopold's Proclamation

Brussels (Saturday), May 11 (U.P.).—In a proclamation to his people, King Leopold said today:

"For the second time in a quarter of a century Belgium, an honest neutral in her conduct, has been attacked by the German Reich, which treats with contempt the most solemn pledges.

"The Belgian people are fundamentally peace-loving and have done all they can to avoid this fate. But when it is a question of sacrifice or dishonor, the Belgian in 1940 will hesitate no more than his father did in 1914.

"To my valiant army and to my courageous soldiers I give greetings from the whole country. In them the worthy heirs of the heroes of 1914 we place all our trust.

"They will fight foot for foot the enemy's attempt to dash across our land and to reduce the amount of our soil violated by the invader.

"Thanks to the efforts made by the country, our powers of resistance are infinitely greater today than they were in 1914.

"The struggle will be hard and the privations will be considerable but there can be no doubt of our final victory.

"I shall remain faithful to the oath I took under the constitution to maintain the independence and integrity of my country as my father did in 1914.

"I have placed myself at the head of the army with the same faith and confidence in our cause.

The British treasury strengthened its grip on citizens' securities.

R. A. F. planes struck fiercely at German planes on the Western Front, an air ministry announcement asserting that "numerous" enemy aircraft were downed.

In his valedictory, Chamberlain said a new cabinet would be sought under Churchill on "a national basis," to include all parties.

While Britain massed her air-striking power and steeled the public against assault from the skies, German planes flew over the Thames estuary, the southeastern coast and into Kent, where an official announcement said four incendiary bombs were dropped near Canterbury, home of famous Canterbury Cathedral.

The air ministry said the bombs did little damage and that all the raiders were driven off.

The British pledge of immediate Allied aid to Belgium and the Netherlands was brief and to the point. Help was on the way, it said, "with all means at their command."

All air force leaves were canceled and pilots, mechanics and ground crews recalled to duty.

Newspapers screamed "You must carry your gas mask." Air raid protection forces were given "stand-by orders."

Machinery to empty sprawling London of women and children who filtered back into the city since the war started was ready in the event of prolonged raids.

London prepared to return to total blackout, effective tonight, as the ministry of home defense withdrew most of the relaxations which followed the first groping nights of the war.

Canada Cabinet Change

Ottawa, May 10 (AP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a cabinet shuffle today, brought Pierre F. Casgrain, speaker of the House of Commons, into his government as secretary of state, and appointed J. A. MacKinnon, of Edmonton, formerly minister without portfolio, to head the department of trade and commerce.

MacKinnon succeeds W. D. Euler, who left the trade and commerce ministry to fill a Senate vacancy. The duties of secretary of state had been carried on by Justice Minister Ernest LaPointe since the death of Fernand Rinfred last July.

Churchill Takes Over

The German aggression against Holland and Belgium, breaking the military stalemate and opening the Western Front to large-scale hostilities, has had as a natural result the elevation of Winston Churchill to the premiership of Great Britain.

For Neville Chamberlain, "the man of peace" who sought so earnestly to avert the war, and who ably conducted British war policy during the first eight months of hostilities, the change has no invidious implications. Mr. Chamberlain, as he indicated in his moving farewell broadcast yesterday, is himself conscious that he has done his work.

That work involved the moral as well as the material preparation of his country for a war which no Englishman wanted and for which both the public and the fighting services were pitifully unprepared. To his successor the retiring prime minister turns over a machine which he has geared for long-range military operations and the guidance of a nation now grimly resolute to hurl back the most serious threat to its existence the British Empire has ever faced.

For the hard-hitting, tense and ruthless period which lies ahead, Mr. Churchill is obviously the appropriate chief. It is not merely that he will have the support of Labor and other elements critical of Chamberlain's direction. Winston Churchill is also the type of leader, determined, courageous, energetic and willing to take chances, which are necessary to match Hitler at his own game.

The new prime minister has a united nation behind him. He has the ardent good will of every civilized people. He has also what is indispensable—a rapidly developing war machine capable of giving the Nazis blow for blow and driving into their consciousness the lesson that the exercise of ruthless force will bring equally merciless retaliation.

Silence In Doorn

The German Embassy yesterday told questioners the "status" of the former Kaiser was unknown. His probable fate, in case the Nazis should capture his refuge at Doorn, Holland, remains a subject of ironical speculation. Would a German victory mean, for him, liberation or the twilight of freedom?

What are his feelings toward the Fuehrer who has taken his place? How does it impress him to see a new German war lord repeating the attempt which he failed to accomplish? On these questions William Hohenzollern maintains an understandable silence.

The former Kaiser certainly has no great reason to delight in the present German regime. Once reputed to have land holdings in Germany estimated at $130,000,000 and a personal fortune of $75,000,000, he was said, in April, 1938, to be living off a strictly limited allowance from Adolf Hitler and that allowance may have been cut off some time ago. The law against export of money from Germany and the sequestration of his properties had in the meantime reduced William to comparative poverty.

The world's bitterness against the aged exile—he was 80 last January—has changed to amused tolerance. For 21 years he has lived quietly, chopping wood, cultivating his roses and writing his memoirs. His quiet, like that of the people who gave him sanctuary, has been rudely disturbed, as his uhlans disturbed the peace of the neighboring Belgians in 1914.

What were William's hopes and fears when the swastika-emblazoned planes roared across the border? Was he waiting for liberation by his English cousins or by the man who usurped the power he once exercised? And did he hide from his countrymen in the bomb shelter built for him by the kindly Dutch? On this, too, there is silence in Doorn.

In The Balance

On several occasions since the outbreak of the war a German attack on the Low Countries has seemed a probability. After the successful seizure of the Scandinavian seaboard it became a virtual certainty. As we wrote in these columns on April 13, "a German invasion of Holland, or Belgium, or both together, is now to be anticipated. Their peril is very real and nothing is gained by pretending otherwise."

The impelling reason for this latest Nazi stroke, in the ninth month of the war, is very different from that which impelled the drive through Belgium at the outbreak of hostilities in 1914. Then the German high command was thinking only of the capture of Paris and the elimination of France as a belligerent before either Great Britain or Russia could exert its full strength. This time it is at Great Britain that the blow is primarily directed. And fundamentally the threat is economic rather than purely military in character.

The Post has frequently pointed out that the general parallel of this war, making due allowance for changed techniques, is with the struggle of Great Britain against Napoleon, and not at all with the much-less revolutionary contest of 1914-18.

It was to force the capitulation of England that Napoleon developed his famous Continental System, designed to destroy every British market on the European Continent. If the seizure of the Low Countries can be accomplished as was that of Scandinavia, and if Mussolini does his duty as Berlin sees it, then France and Portugal will be the only countries in all Europe with which Great Britain can maintain anything like normal trade relations. Should the Mediterranean be wholly closed to British shipping the effects on the economy of that country would be catastrophic.

In addition, and here Hitler has weapons which Napoleon lacked, the seizure of the Low Countries would greatly augment the threat of submarines and airplanes to Britain's sea-borne commerce. If the Germans can capture the Dutch and Belgian ports, as they have already taken over those of Denmark and Norway, half the British coastline, from Dover to the Shetland Islands, will be encircled. Even if the docks of London were left unscathed no ship would be able to leave or enter that great port except at serious risk of air or undersea attack.

If Great Britain should be beaten to her knees, and Hitler is staking everything on that prospect, France would of course, be wholly at the mercy of the Berlin-Rome axis. But there is no reason to suppose that the Allies have any illusions about the magnitude of their joint peril. Military dispositions for this contingency have been made and French and British regiments are already moving across the frontier to give battle to the invader and, if possible, to frustrate plans for which there is no longer any real attempt at either concealment or justification.

On the plains of Flanders, where so often through the centuries the course of history has been written in rivers of blood, gigantic armies will soon be locked in Armageddon. Into this blow Germany is evidently throwing the last ounce of her tremendous national energy. In the retaliatory stroke Great Britain and France will put all the strength they can muster. For they know that if they lose in the Low Countries, as they have so far lost elsewhere, then their case will be desperate indeed.

At the moment, Italy is the great uncertain factor. What will Mussolini do as the scales in Europe hang in the balance? Any equipoise between the opposing forces will increase the decisiveness of his influence. And undoubtedly it is for the moment at which his influence will be truly decisive that this most experienced of the dictators has been grimly waiting.

Golden Boy

In his youth the remarkable thing about Mr. Walter Johnson was not merely that he was the greatest of all pitchers but that he was the only great pitcher who could afford to exclude a curve ball from his repertory. Whenever he found it advisable, as they say, to bear down, he just threw the ball with such velocity that it became virtually invisible.

Indeed there are legends of batters who persuaded themselves, and no doubt attempted to persuade umpires, that Mr. Johnson had never thrown the ball at all; that Mr. Ruel, his catcher, had merely exploded a big firecracker concealed in his mitt. But this, of course, is preposterous.

Today, as a politician, Mr. Johnson is scarcely less remarkable than he was 25 years ago as a pitcher. He got himself elected a commissioner of Montgomery County after a total expenditure of 50 cents, which is the equivalent of five hot dogs or ten campaign-quality cigars. And last Monday Mr. Johnson won the Republican nomination to the House of Representatives from the Sixth Maryland District with virtually no speechmaking.

A taciturn Congressman would seem to be as rare a phenomenon as a pitcher who can throw baseballs with such speed that nobody knows whether they curve or not. If Mr. Johnson is elected he will come close to being at the Capitol what he was on the mound, the only one of his kind.

Some insist that one reason Mr. Johnson in his prime declined to throw curves was out of compassion for his opponents. He feared, they say, that the curves might break too close and so pass right through the midriffs of batters who would thereafter go about perforated like so many cheeses. Perhaps his distaste for oratory is also out of humane consideration for his fellows.

The sad part of this analogy is that, as years crept upon him, Mr. Johnson was forced in spite of himself to develop a curve ball. Perhaps in the end he will also be forced not only into making remarks but into extending them for the record. Meantime, let us be grateful for this oasis of silence in a much-too-noisy world.

The Lid Is Off

Until this week Hitler's policy was one of piecemeal ventures and limited risks.

He did not order the military occupation of the Rhineland until his vast program of rearmament was well under way. He did not seize Austria until after the Rhineland had been made secure. Anschluss was the prelude to the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia which, together with the completion of the Siegfried Line, made possible the rapid conquest of Poland. In Norway, to be sure, Hitler took greater risks, but the advantages were still overwhelmingly with him.

With the invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, Hitler has, practically for the first time, overthrown this policy of caution. He is now risking everything on one great throw of the dice. Established in the Low Countries the German armies will be in a position to outflank the Maginot Line and sweep down on northern France and the Channel ports. Of at least equal importance, Hitler will at last have a base for a concentrated attack on England.

It is a gambler's chance that Hitler has taken. But Hitler has gambled before and won and there can be no certainty that he will not win again. If he does, Great Britain and France and all the rest of Europe will lie prostrate at his feet and the comfortable dream which Americans have enjoyed in contemplation of the wide ocean that separates the Old World from the New will disappear with other long-harbored illusions.

But to win, Hitler must win quickly. The speedy success achieved by German arms in Poland and Norway must be repeated in Holland and Belgium or else the weapons which the Fuehrer has employed to achieve his successive aggressions will be turned against the Third Reich.

For instance, in lifting the lid on air bombings of civilian centers Hitler has exposed to Allied reprisals Germany's own industrial areas, some of them, like the Ruhr and the Rhineland, extremely vulnerable to air attack from French and Belgian bases. Furthermore, Hitler has now multiplied the number of his enemies. Belgium and the Netherlands together can muster an armed force of at least a million. And the months of stalemate that followed the outbreak of the war have given both countries a chance to build up their defenses and to put themselves in readiness for an attack which, when it occurred, could hardly have come as a surprise. Belgium has her Albert Line; the Netherlands their flooded fields. And the proximity of the Low Countries to France and Great Britain means that they will not fight alone. Already Allied troops have moved into Belgium. Undoubtedly many more will be sent.

The military problem facing Germany requires above and beyond all the rapid overrunning of the Netherlands the destruction of the Dutch capacity to resist before sufficient aid can be sent them by their allies. In that endeavor Germany is counting heavily on her air force, whose decisive importance was demonstrated in Poland and Norway. But the air superiority which Germany possessed in those theaters of war is much less as against the Allies. This circumstance also accentuates the great importance of the speed factor.

In any event Hitler has now chosen to throw away the defensive advantage arising out of the practically impregnable Siegfried Line in order to wage offensive warfare. The war of siege is now over. A period of open fighting has begun with far-reaching possibilities for either side. Should Hitler fail in his endeavor to overcome Belgian and Dutch resistance in short order it would then not be the French but the German flank that would be in danger of being turned. The war which Hitler has hitherto succeeded in waging on foreign soil might then be brought home to Germany herself. The next weeks will decide.

"Oklahoma's Tragedy"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Apropos of Mark Sullivan's comment on "The Forces Behind the Migration," under the heading, "Oklahoma's Tragedy," a few observations:

To mention "The Grapes of Wrath" with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would seem to test whether departed folk ever turn over in their graves. If so, surely Harriet Beecher Stowe has.

Mr. Sullivan talks about the Joads and why, according to Steinbeck's filthy fiction, they left Oklahoma. He thinks their plight the logical fate for those who made the Oklahoma "rush" 51 years ago.

To Oklahomans the opening in 1889 was the "run" and not the "rush." The locality from which Steinbeck says the Joads trekked is at least 150 miles from the nearest point in Oklahoma figured in any of the several "runs." It is in the old Indian Territory, in which there were some white people fully 50 years before the Oklahoma "run" of 1889, and still farther, by at least 100 miles, from any part of the so-called dust bowl, out of which Steinbeck says the Joads blew.

With an Oklahoman of 34 years' residence. Mr. Sullivan's contribution to "The Grapes of Wrath" controversy rates as of some interest but little value. E. F. McKAY.

"Some Record"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Reliable information regarding the Soviet government shows 30,000,000 children in primary and secondary schools, and over half a million in higher schools and universities. This against 7,800,000 children attending primary and second schools in old Tsarist Russia. Some record this.

Further, the number of schools built under the Soviet regime is greater than the number of schools during three centuries of Romanoff rule. Again, under Soviet rule, illiteracy has been reduced from 67 per cent in 1917 to less than 10 per cent in 1936.

In the Soviet Union, the working day is the shortest in the world, being a seven-hour day. This workday is shortened one hour where unfavorable conditions exist. Office workers work six hours a day. Most Soviet workers are on the six-day continuous week, with five days of work followed by one day of rest.

A government that can educate its people to the extent that the Soviet is doing must be something different from what its enemies claim for it. Compare the record as given above with that of many Latin countries, where education is at a low ebb but where ignorance and superstition abound. No wonder intelligent people are slow to believe vicious stories about Soviet Russia.

Air Force

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

After the World War General Billie Mitchell got bounced out of the Army, by the back door route, for telling the brass hats that the air service was the coming weapon and that warships were for their way out.

The news from Europe in the last year or so, particularly from Norway, indicates that Billie apparently knew his onions—that precedent bore down so hard on the admirals and brass hats they just couldn't lift themselves out of the rut.

No use living in the past—or getting sore at the big shots of yesterday—but every real American is interested in what the Army and Navy are doing today. Strong possibility that we may have to use them. "CURIOUS."

Cruelty To Animals

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Referring to the letter in The Post of May 1 signed J. S. Bierly, will say that I take most emphatic exception to the statements made by the writer, and especially to the remark that animals are things to be used at man's discretion to make his life happier.

Animals most certainly were not created for the purpose of serving man but to lead their own lives in their own way, and man has no right to molest them unless they attack him. We might as well say that the soldiers of the Allies and the Norwegians were created to provide targets for the bombs and bullets of the Nazis.

Animals have no voice to defend themselves or tell their side of the question. Is it any wonder that a being so helpless would be taken advantage of by man, the stronger and shrewder animal? Everything that is created has a right to live its natural life. I am one of those who believe animals have rights too.

All clean-thinking people shrink from inflicting injury on a being weaker than himself. That is what civilization is. It is indeed praiseworthy to desire fair controversy, to match one's wits and strength against an adversary to equal ability, the best one wins, but it is the worst kind of cowardice to harm those who are helpless and completely at one's mercy. Our self-respect would not permit us to do it. M. R. INGRAM.

"The Big Train"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The millions of admirers of Walter Johnson, the "Big Train" of baseball, are gratified at his election as the Republican nominee for the House of Representatives from the Sixth Maryland District, particularly as he made little effort to secure the nomination. It seems a case of the office seeking the man, a theory of our Government now almost forgotten. Walter's election in November promises to be largely non-political.

Johnson is a modest man, unassuming and without desire for public acclaim. He consented to submit his candidacy for the nomination only after much pressure from friends and fellow Republicans.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington ball club, recently stated to the writer: "Walter Johnson may not know all the tricks of a politician, but he is an honest-to-goodness fellow and a man of character, which would be a great asset in Congress. He would always be standing for an honest and upright policy in whatever he undertook."

Westbrook Pegler wound up his column of May 7 with this statement: "Character is the crying need of the American people today." Walter Johnson possesses character plus common sense. It sustained him as a great ball-player—it will make him an exemplary member of Congress. The writer salutes him as a future member of the Committee on District of Columbia.

Thanks The Firemen

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am addressing this letter to you and through you to the residents of the 3700 block of Albemarle street northwest.

I read in last night's paper that the District Government has finally decided to "abate the nuisance," meaning draining the water hole that has been a bone of contention in that block for the past three years.

I have also read from time to time how the residents have appealed to one agency or another of the District for help but none was forthcoming, until at last the Fire Department sent a crew of men up there and pumped the hole dry.

Now what I am driving at is this: The residents of the street certainly did make plenty of fuss about draining that hole but since it has been done (and by an outfit that does not have anything to do with that type of work generally but can do anything in an emergency) I have not seen one word of thanks of any kind for the work they did.

People tip a waiter for bringing them a bowl of soup or a taxi driver for riding them a block or two so I think that the least those residents of Albemarle street could have done was to thank the firemen who worked for five long hours in a drizzling rain to pump out that hole.

Noisy Motorists

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

I live within two blocks of the Government Printing Office, North Capitol and H streets. The men who work at the office park their cars along the adjoining streets. In the early morning, between 1 and 2 in the morning, when they come off the night shift, there is a constant and loud and disturbing noise, for more than half an hour, of motors starting, doors slamming, loud conversations and laughter and calls, all of which robs us poor people who live along these streets of our night's restful sleep. I know very well that there must be some necessary noises connected with cars starting, but if these same men's attention were properly directed to the thoughtlessness, might we not hope that they would be more considerate of us poor people who cannot move from the neighborhood.

Sherwood Play

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I should like to express publicly my deep appreciation to Robert E. Sherwood, the playwright, for giving us "There Shall Be No Night;" to Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne for their splendid portrayal of the principal characters; to a fine supporting cast; and to the Theater Guild for giving Washingtonians the opportunity of seeing the play during the week of April 22—prior to its New York opening.

This dynamic drama depicting the Russian invasion of Finland should be seen by all intelligent Americans. I wish that it could be produced in every large city and in every small town throughout the United States. We, who have seen it, should do well to ponder its significance. No democratic country is safe today from the subversive forces which threaten its security, and constant vigilance is necessary to destroy their influence.

Let us not ridicule our Dies Committee hearings and other investigations of un-American activities. We don't want any Trojan horse tactics here. We want to keep America safe for Americans!

A Cute Investigation

To rate the distinction of being cute a thing must be attractive in the dainty or picturesque manner of a child or a small animal. There are not a great many things in the world that have the innocent, "young lost look" that is so appealing in tiny creatures of very tender age; so "cute" in its proper sense is very much limited in its noun affinities.

That is not to say that it has no rightful place in our vocabulary. Indeed there are nouns, shy, engaging diminutives, that would suffer on occasion without its assistance. It has that wee cooing connotation that links it with "baby" or "bunny" as naturally as "financial" joins hands with "embarrassment," but it is a clear case of linguistic mayhem to hitch it to mountains, barns, and bridges.

I had on my "country" shoes, sturdy, size nine, low-heeled seven-leaguers, when my neighbor dropped in. "What cute new shoes you have," she remarked and plunged on to the next topic without even a pause. That, I began to observe, is the way current perversions of "cute" manage to invade the language. They sweep in as fillers on the uninterrupted flow of "conversation."

One feels the necessity—I don't know why—to remark on your new dress, shoes, hat, draperies, rug, or lawn mower. So they say "It's cute." If it seems to require a little extra emphasis they say "It's awful cute" or they give the thing a double dash of verbal vigor by a trick of inflection and then you get "It's ca-yute." Thus a fragile and much abused adjective is reduced to a rubber stamp status, a sort of conversational code applied generously and without indue mental strain.

Maybe this was domestic treason but I took to listening at the dinner table, counting all the perfunctory "cutes" and entering them with annotations in a record book. One evening I gathered six variations of this linguistic lapse. There were easy, off-hand remarks about a cute section of the city, a cute lawn, a cute couple. Some one had made a cute speech, there was something about a cute idea, and—shades of N. Webster!—I caught myself discussing the relative cuteness of morning glories and honeysuckle for the back fence.

Later, when I submitted to the family a report on my dinner table research, it developed—from unauthenticated sources—that I had done verbal violence to the innocent little adjective in a dozen other instances. "Well," I said, "why don't you start a cross-investigation?" I was on the point of suggesting a bounty payable to the captor for each "cute" caught wandering aimlessly outside the restricted limits of its proper definition. After a moment's reflection that did not seem like such a good idea.

A scientific investigation ought to be purely objective (I once heard a professor say that). So, extending the study beyond the home, with quantitative exactness, I gleaned these gems for the record:

Four fugitive "cutes" during a twenty-minute bus ride. I'm sure there were others, potential if not expressed, on the same bus but I could not "cover" the entire space at one time. I could just look at some of the passengers and see that that was their favorite adjective. But I was being very, very objective so I didn't register that on my cuteometer;

One slightly mangled "cute" on the elevator. "That a new hat, Jane?" "Uh-huh." "'Scute." I counted that one;

Five breathless "cutes" half drowned in soup during a thirty-minute lunch period. In strict scientific honesty I must report that I deliberately induced two of them; one by calling attention to my bushel-of-beads necklace, the other by saying invitingly, "I don't know whether I like this hat or not;"

Twenty-three adjectival assaults on my verbal protege during a three-hour shopping tour. Indeed shopping shares honors with bridge playing as one of the most prolific sources of "cute"-besprinkled "conversation." A matron was trying on a spring coat, size forty-two. It was a handsome coat and was definitely not baby-like nor bunny-looking. She preened and posed while I drew near to gather up another specimen for the record. Sure enough: to her companion, "Ann, do you think this is kind 'o cute on me?" Came the ready reply, "It's awful cute, Mabel." Triumphantly I continued "shopping" for other specimens, some over the counter, some in the fitting rooms and some miscellaneous ones on the elevators and in the aisles.

Analysis of my voluminous data discloses among other significant facts that "cute" is exclusively a woman's word. I didn't hear it drop from masculine lips once during my entire investigation. There was a time when I thought I might be able to record such a phenomenon but it was not to be.

A frothy looking blonde was dithering through the shopping section, exclaiming "Oh" and "Ah" to a weary, reluctant looking man, evidently her husband. With purposeful skill she steered him to a shop window all a-dazzle with "hats." I closed in on them as a sleuth on his human quarry, and this is what I got: "Oh that's ca-yute Oswald. Oswald isn't that cute?" Oswald grunted a reluctant assent. I recommend mercy for Oswald on the ground that he was but an involuntary accessory after the fact.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Pietistical Sham

THIS IS AN OPPORTUNE moment to put a finger on the pietistical sham of William Green, wherein he calls upon the public authorities to prosecute malefactors operating under the fair name and sacred sign of labor with a capital L.

A few months ago Mr. Green went to East St. Louis for an official occasion, and in the course of his remarks to the assembled brothers—including, no doubt, the usual quota of gorillas from the brothel and blackjack trades—showed the boys an expanse of white eye as he called on heaven to witness that, like Calvin Coolidge's parson, he stood four-square against sin.

Then, in an "officer-do-your-duty" tone of voice Mr. Green put it up to the public authorities to arrest and send to prison all unionleers who rob their subjects of dues, fines and assessments, extort money from employers or others, or otherwise offend against the Ten Commandments or the laws of the United States or its political subdivisions.

We come now to the case of the predatory A. F. of L. racket known as the Building Service Employes' Union, which has been holding a convention in Atlantic City to calm the confusion arising from the indictment of George Scalise, the gangster of the Little Augie tribe, which is an affiliate of the Capone and Nitti mobs and a scion of that great, fecund mother of so many murderers and larcenous litters of criminal vermin, the Sicilian Union.

SCALISE, a pander, was indicted for extortion by Thomas E. Dewey, and his resignation from the presidency was approved with regret by the same national board, minus one member, which, last January, rejected the same. The member now missing from the board who voted not to accept the resignation in January is Robert Everitt, who has a long but cheap police record compiled over a 20-year career composed of entries ranging in degree from spitting on the sidewalk to the passing of counterfeit money. His convictions were for receiving stolen goods and breaking and entering, and he is now under indictment in Boston with two accomplices—one a counterfeiter, the other a swindler—on a charge of misusing the label of the A. F. of L. in the promotion of a fraudulent we-boys publication. His prosecutor is Daniel Doherty, who formerly was national commander of the American Legion, and it may be said to the parenthetical credit of a subsidiary of the A. F. of L. that his indictment and prosecution were procured by the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, whose leading officials appear to resent the rise of underworld influence in labor circles.

IN ATLANTIC CITY, however, when Mr. Dewey's agents picked up three officials of the Scalise racket on witness subpoenas and tried to catch the union's bookkeeper, the union, far from cooperating, not only obstructed the attempt but denounced Dewey as a political opportunist and enemy of labor, failed to produce the bookkeeper and sounded jiggers to other such rackets to keep out of New Jersey because the law there permitted the extradition of material witnesses to New York.

It is not assumed that these ornaments of labor will come to New York to assist in a serious criminal case. If they should take it on the lam to Illinois, the main, or headquarters, rat hole of labor racketeers, they probably cannot be compelled to give any testimony at all. One of these individuals, incidentally, is Thomas Burke, who was third vice president under Scalise and accompanied Scalise, Little Augie and Charles Fischetti, a cousin of Al Capone, to Cuba in February, 1938. He has now been elevated to the first vice presidency in the "reform" of this main subsidiary of the American Federation of Labor.

So much for Mr. Green's solemn demand that public officials do their duty against labor racketeers and his insistence before his Maker that the A. F. of L. stands for law and order and the highest standards of American citizenship.

The Arid Southwest

WEST IS WEST, and South is South, and then there is the country, neither South nor West, of which Erna Fergusson writes in "Our Southwest" (Knopf, $3.50).

San Francisco is West, and so is Denver; but, as to southern coastal California, Miss Ferguson asks, "Who would recognize its gargantuan congeries of Iowa villages as Southwest? Who, living under a hedge of mammoth geraniums on a California farm, miscalled a ranch, knows anything of the arid Southwest?" Neither Dallas nor Houston is Southwest; Miss Fergusson dubiously admits San Antonio as a border city, largely because of its Mexican population and atmosphere, although it has an un-Southwestern rainfall.

She isn't sure about Oklahoma as a whole, but recognizes Will Rogers as an authentic Southwesterner. He was tall and lean, talked like folks, chewed gum, was unimpressed by wealth or position, and had a genuine Southwestern smile. The Mohave Desert, and southern Colorado belong, and, of course, all New Mexico and Arizona. Almost anything one says of the Southwest as a whole is untrue of some part of it; but, in general, to be Southwestern a place must be short of rain, and accept Spanish-Americans and Indians as a part of the normal landscape. And Erna Fergusson loves it.

She loves it with a deep, ingrained, ancestral affection; and she writes of it as only a native daughter of a native son could write. Her grandfather, old Franz Huning, went across the plains, afoot with a cattle train, in 1848, and, liking the country, settled down, first in Santa Fe, then in Albuquerque. Erna Fergusson grew up with Albuquerque; the man who built Tonto Dam in the first decade of the century was Uncle Louis to her; she talked, 30 years ago, with Teresina Bent, who was 6 years old in 1846 when the Taos Indians, revolting, killed Teresina's father, Uncle Sam's first civil Governor in New Mexico, and she doesn't think Willa Cather got that story quite right in "Death Comes for the Archbishop." Erna Fergusson's grandfather knew Kit Carson. She is entitled to laugh at Mabel Dodge Luhan, who dared to set down on paper that "nobody had ever heard of New Mexico until I went there;" and she is generous enough to recognize that no one has yet written better of the wide, pale Taos Valley than has that same egoistical evangelist, who married a Taos Indian.

Texas, she remarks, "spent nearly a century apologizing for its Spanish background, even for its Spanish-speaking people, and trying to be as much like a city of the old South as possible," and except in San Antonio, which, lately, has become commercially proud of its old Spanish inheritance, most of Texas still proudly replaces fine old buildings with skyscrapers and filling stations. The University of Texas, she says, has become semi-Spanish; its library has a central stack running up 27 stories, with a Spanish patio half way up and a Greek temple on top. She seems to enjoy reminding the greatest State in the Union that Moses and Stephen F. Austin, for whom it named its capital, entered Texas on an agreement to bring in only Catholic colonists, and never to countenance slavery; that Sam Houston, for whom its largest city is named, was for many years of his life a "squaw man," and that among the deathless heroes who fell at the Alamo were many with pure Spanish names.

NEW MEXICO and Arizona are home ground to her; she writes of them with a rare combination of passion and common sense. She makes one see the tangled blue-black shadows of the gaunt saguaro cactus on the desert, and the lush grama grass in the draws; she loves to report the eloquent indignation of old-time individualists, and she knows that only Uncle Sam could reclaim a land that was being grazed and washed away. She respects the age-old traditions of the Rio Grande Pueblos, yet is acutely aware that nothing about the Indians is, or ever was, unchanging; their pottery, basketry and blanket handicrafts, for instance, were dying out a quarter of a century ago, and have been revived because far-sighted white men, old-timers of the Fred Harvey outfit and newcoming artists, encouraged them. She recognizes what the artists have done for New Mexico and the Indians, yet she knows that "they all went nuts about something."

"Do you suppose it's our altitude?" a Santa Fe lawyer asked a Santa Fe doctor over their daily whisky and soda.

"On the contrary," came the reply. "It's the latitude they bring along."

White House Scene

By Mark Sullivan

Alert, Not Tense

NEARING the White House, I felt, as often these recent months, the irony implicit in the house which is the last you pass before you cross the street to the executive office gate. This nearest privately-owned building to the seat of government is an old-fashioned, four-story brick residence, bay-windowed, big-chimneyed, with worn brown-stone steps, its little lawn iron-fenced, a solid and decorous relic of an older time. No longer a residence, it now houses an institution which, on a big brass tablet, announces the commodity in which it deals, "Carnegie Endowment for International Peace." I reflected that if the custodian of that institution, gentle, scholarly Dr. James Brown Scott, really has on hand any of the commodity his sign purports to provide, he should this day find a ready market for his wares. If international peace were a marketable article, Dr. Scott could be a billionaire.

Crossing the street to enter the White House gate, I encountered, leaning against the gatepost, an ancient colored man, who ingratiatingly conveyed to me that he lacked breakfast. As a momentary and precarious "have," I practiced appeasement of the "have-nots" to the extent of a silver quarter.

WITHIN the sunny White House lawn, the elms wore the tender green of a belated spring; the yews had a faint gossamer of bright new green upon the sombre dark that is their winter color. Along the driveway were parked the cars whose low-number license plates we recognize as meaning that cabinet members are in the President's office. On the White House steps were eager camera men, busy with the impact of crisis upon their calling. Inside the door, experienced Secret Service man Jimmy Sloan, as alert, and as genial to those entitled to geniality, as in the days when he guarded another Roosevelt President, said, "postponed to 11:30." The President would not see us for an hour.

We grouped about, talking of—do I need to say? I felt that an hour was not enough to be conclusive; that for many a day, and month and year, there will be talk about the effect of today's events upon the United States. We shall talk it, and write it, and live it, and our children's children too.

As 11:30 neared, the crowd of newspaper men was large. Some were a little drawn-eyed. The night before, when winding up their day's work, the radio, just before midnight, brought the news that called them back to that extra outgiving of energy, that second wind of effort, which is the frequent demand upon working reporters. For several hours more, during the depth of the night, they had kept their slippery foothold upon the very top of that dancing bubble which is the moment's news.

THIS COMMONPLACE note, the loss of rest, was in the President's first remark when we gathered before him—he hoped we had had more sleep than he. This casualness was the dominant note of the quarter-hour we spent with him. History, I imagine, and even more, fiction and the motion-picture, will like to say the scene was tense. It was not. There was, on the part of the newspaper men, alertness, but not tenseness. On the President's part there was consciousness of high events, yet also complete coolness. About the business of the conference, his first remark was, of all things, that he hadn't any particular news to give out. This the newspaper men took in the spirit in which it was said. The whole atmosphere was one of serious matter-of-factness.

Only one thing did the President say that he obviously had planned to say. The only statement that he volunteered of his own initiative was a reference to the statement of the Queen of Holland. "I think I can say personally," the President began—and he was careful to emphasize the word "personally"—"I think I can say personally that I am in full sympathy with the very excellent statement that was given out, the proclamation of the Queen of The Netherlands, and let it go at that; it is worth reading."

Mr. Fred Essary of the Baltimore Sun asked if this could be quoted. Mr. Roosevelt said yes, and asked the stenographer to repeat it, so that newspaper men could take it down. The President's stenographer turned back a few pages of his notebook. He—his name is Mr. Henry Kannee—is, to those who reflect upon the milieus of the world's exalted ones, an interesting figure. A quiet young man, alert but utterly self-effacing, observing all but himself by preference unobserved, expert in his work and concentrated upon it, he has taken down every word the President has said at hundreds of press conferences. Now, a little flustered at suddenly having the role of speaker instead of recorder, he, in repeating what the President had said, omitted the introduction, "I think I can personally." The President called attention to the omission, and had these words repeated. Obviously Mr. Roosevelt wished to make clear that what he said was personal only.

WHEN THE TIME for questions by the newspaper men began, the first was the obvious, bald one, "Can we stay out of the war"? To that, and all similar questions, the President was quietly and good humoredly disarming. He wished to avert excitement, drama, and he did. To one question his answer was that the event in Europe makes no change in the situation; to another, that the question is being studied. At one question he rose to his habitual humor—that question, he said, was an "if" question, he had counted and there were seven separate "ifs" in it. Finally, after a period that was briefer than most conferences, someone, partly in consideration of the tired newspaper men and partly in consideration of the President, said the words which have become a formula for terminating press conferences. "Thank you very much, Mr. President."

Churchill's Career

By Jack Culmer
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Prime Minister's Biography

London, May 10.—Winston Churchill, England's new Prime Minister, is the one man to whom the British public has looked for inspiration and encouragement since the war began.

Called back to his World War job as supreme dictator of His Majesty's navy on the day Britain declared war on Germany, the 65-year-old politician has become a national hero.

People like the forthright way he says what he thinks and feels, the frequent surprises he springs, and his "bulldog determination" to defeat Nazi Germany.

Seldom Criticized

In six months the navy has lost around 3,000 officers and men and over 30 ships, yet so great is the nation's confidence in Churchill that his conduct of the war at sea seldom has been criticized by the man in the street.

A tireless, enthusiastic worker, Churchill seldom has spent more than a few hours away from his office in Whitehall since he took over the nerve center of the navy.

The day Churchill assumed office an official handed him a government pass so he wouldn't be stopped by admiralty doorkeepers possibly unaware of his identity. He tore the pass into shreds. "My face is my fortune," he said.

A favorite target of political cartoonists for more than 30 years, Churchill is better known by sight to the people of England than any other statesman.

His wartime speeches have been hailed as "the best oratory of the war." They have been criticized, but Churchill weathers criticism with dogged imperturbability.

Authorized army and naval spokesmen, scrupulously declining to dramatize what meager news they are allowed to give out, often have appeared surprised by the "startling disclosures" Churchill has made.

An "old-fashioned patriot" who believes in the power and majesty of the British Empire, Churchill is a "big ship" man who believes that in the final analysis sea power depends on possession of overwhelming strength in capital ships. With him at the head of government, England will continue to push production of battleships and battle cruisers.

Admits War Is Hard

Englishmen like the frank way Churchill never has pretended that the war will be anything but hard and unrelentless, and his repeated emphasis on the fact shipping losses are inevitable.

Since the war began Churchill has closed Chartwell Manor, the spacious country house at Westerham in Kent, where in peacetime he writes, entertains a few intimate friends and watches over the dozen black swans he keeps as pets.

On the rare occasions when he manages to slip away from Whitehall for a week-end in the country, he occupies a modest cottage on the manor grounds. He built it himself. He is an expert bricklayer.

Churchill was the eldest son of Lord and Lady Randolph Churchill. His mother was the former Jennie Jerome, daughter of Leonard Jerome of New York.

He attended school at Harrow and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, and nicknamed "Winnie," was commissioned as lieutenant in the Fourth Hussars.

He got a leave from his regiment to enlist with the Spanish forces in the war against Cuba and won the Spanish order of military merit, first class.

In 1897 he served on India's northwest frontier, where the Mad Mullah of Swat had aroused the Pathans to war. Awarded a medal and mentioned in dispatches.

He won another clasp to his medal in the fighting at Khyber Pass. He found time to write his first book, "The Story of the Malakand Field Force," and then was off for further fighting in Egypt.

He headed a charge against dervishes and was given another medal for gallantry in action. His experiences produced another book, "The River War." Meantime, he had acted as newspaper correspondent.

In 1899 he ran for Parliament but was defeated. Served in the Boer war, was captured and made a spectacular escape. Next year he wrote two books, "London to Ladysmith via Pretoria' and "Ian Hamilton's March."

After the Boer war he was elected to Parliament and switched politics several times thereafter.

Headed Board of Trade

In 1906-08 he was undersecretary for the colonies and president of the board of trade for two years after that. He was home secretary in 1910-11. Then for four years he was first lord of the admiralty, during part of the World War period.

In 1915 he was chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. He was minister of munitions in 1917; secretary for war and air in 1918-21; secretary for the colonies, 1921-22; chancellor of the exchequer from 1924-29.

He figured prominently in various capacities in the World War. As first lord of the admiralty he had built the British fleet up and kept it mobilized so it was able to bottle up the German fleet.

He personally went to Antwerp when the British rushed men and ships there following the German invasion. He hoped to save the city from the Germans, but failed.

He encountered another failure in the Dardanelles campaign and was a political victim of the fiasco. So he resigned and went to France, serving as a lieutenant colonel commanding the Scots Fusiliers.

Then Prime Minister Lloyd George called him back into the cabinet as minister of munitions and other capacities.

Nazis Denounced Him

In 1924 he was reelected to Parliament and achieved his ambition of occupying his father's post in the exchequer.

Ramsay MacDonald's government reduced him to the status of a private member of the Commons.

He foresaw Germany's preparations for the present war and his biting remarks against Hitler made him a target for many Nazi verbal broadsides.

He became again first lord of the admiralty and gradually increased his influence in the government of Neville Chamberlain.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Our Duty To America Is Defined

ONLY A MIRACLE, like the miracle of the Marne, can now prevent the European war from becoming a world war. For while Norway and Denmark were outposts, the Netherlands and Belgium, and it may be Switzerland, are the gateways to the citadel itself. This is, as Hitler proclaimed, the supreme effort to destroy the Allies totally and if the enterprise shows signs of succeeding, Mussolini will join him and almost certainly Russia will follow. If the blow is deadly enough, Spain in Europe and Japan in the Far East will find some way to intervene so that they may participate in the totalitarian victory and qualify as partners.

For the United States this is the beginning of the most critical period in 70 years. Our security is gravely jeopardized. The Nation is unprepared in all essential respects—in the material for defense, in training, in discipline, in its industrial organization, in its politicians, and in its mind and heart—to protect adequately and swiftly its vital interests. Our cities will not be bombed; our young men will not be conscripted and sent to fight in Belgium. But if the offensive which Hitler has now launched succeeds, we shall know no peace in our lifetime.

If it succeeds, and as it succeeds, we shall be confronted—not at some more convenient moment after the election in November but in the next months, weeks, days, and hours—with choices of the greatest magnitude. We shall be compelled to choose again and again—in the Pacific, in the Atlantic, in the Caribbean, in South America, in Africa between retreat and resistance. The choices will not be a simple choice between war and peace. They will be choices between giving up the protection behind which we have lived for more than a century in individual freedom and without militarism and of acting henceforth with full and impressive energy to maintain that protection. For if the Allied power falls, there will fall with it all the outer defenses of the Western Hemisphere, and we shall be left isolated in a world dominated on both sides of our oceans by the most formidable alliance of victorious conquerors that was ever formed in the whole history of man.

NO DOUBT we should be able to protect the 48 States from direct invasion. But in the present condition of our defenses and in the present condition of our minds that is all we can be reasonably sure of doing. If the Allied power falls in Europe, our fleet will be needed nearer home and we can protect nothing in the Far East, not the Philippines or The Netherlands Indies: we must, then resign ourselves to the fact that Japan will be master of the Pacific, and, therefore, capable of subjecting us to very serious pressure upon some of the most essential materials of our economic life. If the Allied power falls in Europe, the victorious coalition headed by Hitler will seize and hold air and fleet bases in Iceland, Greenland, perhaps Ireland, Gibraltar, the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands, and in the French, Belgian and British colonies along the west coast of Africa. Our neighbors in the Atlantic will then be not the easy-going and complacent British but the Rome-Berlin axis intoxicated with victory and drunk with power. If the Allied power falls in Europe, there will appear in some, perhaps in many, of the countries of this hemisphere that we are sworn to protect, subversive movements led by native adventurers, financed and organized by the totalitarian powers. They will be hard to deal with. They will jeopardize most gravely the inner defenses of the United States.

All this will not destroy us. But it will mean that we and our children will have to live wholly different lives. Isolated in a world which envies us and despises us, we too shall have to become a nation in arms. We too shall have to have conscription; we too shall have to regiment capital and labor in order that we may be able to build the ships, and the airplanes, and the guns and tanks without which we shall be harassed and intimidated, threatened and blackmailed by the coalition on both sides of us.

IT IS A GRIM picture. If it is not too grim, it will be because the valor and skill of the French and the British and the Belgians and the Dutch are able to withstand the assault and repel it. If they are not, if the Allies fall and are overcome and their power is destroyed, then the consequences will be at least as grim as I have painted them.

In any event this is no parlor game in which a box of candy is to be awarded to the best guesser. This is a situation in which the lives of men and the fates of nations are at stake, and we have a duty, each and every one of us, which must be done. Our duty is to prepare for the worst. However much we continue to hope for the best, our duty is to begin acting at once on the basic assumption that the Allies may lose the war this summer, and that before the snow flies again, we may stand alone and isolated, the last great democracy on earth.

For unless we do prepare for the worst, we shall by our very unpreparedness invite the worst. There is no more time left for trifling. There is no more time left for conducting our affairs on the basis of Gallup polls and on the hunches of office-seekers as to what the voters of Nebraska or West Virginia are going to think next November. There is no more time left for arguing as to whether this country shall have two more battleships five years hence. There is no more time left for backing and filling about whether or not this country is to start organizing itself seriously for the defense of its vital interests.

THE FIRST THING that must be done only the President can do. He must tell the people the truth as he sees it and trust to their patriotism and their good sense. That is his duty: the people are entitled to know what their President really thinks. Let the partisan politicians make the most of it. For it might as well be settled now, rather than later when the position may be still more critical, whether the issue of national security is to be kicked about by self-seeking partisan politicians. My impression is that the disinterested people of this country are just about fed up with all this calculated insincerity, which is politely called political strategy, that they are aware of the extreme peril of this hour, and they will respond to the leadership of the President of the United States.

The next thing to do is to adopt a program of national defense of vastly greater scope than that which is now in operation. The experience of Great Britain should be a lesson to us that it is not enough to appropriate money to buy what the existing facilities can supply: it is necessary to create new shipyards, new airplane factories, new plants for the production of guns and other implements of war. There is needed a large investment of new capital: it is not safe to let the aircraft industry, for example, wait for its expansion upon subsidies from the Allies. The subsidies should be given by the United States Government as a primary measure of American national defense, and they should be given promptly and on a large scale so that no unnecessary time may be lost in building the plants, manufacturing the tools, training the workmen, and recruiting the managers.

THESE THINGS cannot be improvised, and to wait another year until Congress comes back after the elections is to risk putting this country in a position where, like Great Britain today, it might never, or not without immeasurable sacrifice, be able to make up for the time it had lost. No doubt these are not the things politicians think it safe to do in an election year. This is no ordinary year, and I venture to predict that if our public men now fail to do the imperative things, the time will come when it will not be politically safe for them to face the voters with a record of having neglected these imperative things.

The people are ready to rally. Which way, Mr. President?

Author to Tell Of Boogie Woogie On Air Tonight

Elliot Paul, plump, goateed author of "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," and recent victim of boogie woogie, a low-down piano music, which he plays now with greatest of vigor, will be in Washington today with his boogie woogie teacher.

PAUL

From 9:30 to 10 o'clock tonight, on WRC, Paul will display his talents on "Men With Batons," the weekly music program conducted by Bill Gottlieb, The Post's swing columnist. With Gottlieb, he will explain boogie woogie's finer techniques. At 6 p. m. today, Paul and his teacher, Albert Ammons, will give a concert at the Hayden Studios, 6 Dupont Circle northwest, for the benefit of Spanish relief.

Paul did most of his writing in Washington after leaving Spain during the civil war there.

Union Sodality To Elect Today At G. U. Parley

Representatives of sodalities at 15 high schools and five colleges in the District will attend the Union Sodality meeting today at Georgetown University to elect officers and discuss problems of Catholic students.

The union board will meet at 9:30 a. m. and the general session will open at 10. This session will be addressed by Miss Grace Mehren, chairman; Hugh Duffy, prefect of the resident sodality of Georgetown; Paul Leonard, president of the High School Union, and the Rev. Francis P. LeBuffe, Eastern Sodality secretary. The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, rector of Georgetown, will pronounce the invocation.

After committee meetings at 10:45, the general session will reconvene at 11:30 to hear the Rev. Stephen F. McNamee outline "Social Problems of Catholic Students." Open discussions will be held at 2:30 p. m. and a tea dance and reception at 4.

Gen. and Mrs. George Marshall Give Garden Party Reception

'Bodyguard' of Four Boys Entertains Guests; Hundreds Call at Quarters in Fort Myer; Rooms Are Banked With Flowers

By Elizabeth Henney

A smiling sun . . . soft breezes blowing . . . a gracious hostess in a filmy gown of gray and rose . . . a tall, friendly host in the blue and gold of the Army uniform . . . thousands of guests drifting through a flower-filled house and out onto rolling green lawns dotted with colorful shrubs and bushes . . . gay flowering garden party frocks, bright short spring prints and gold graided blue uniforms in colorful clusters around refreshment marquees . . . such was the picture at the garden party reception (the first of the season) given yesterday by the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. George C. Marshall, and Mrs. Marshall, at their quarters in Fort Myer, Va.

With Mrs. Marshall's personal bodyguard of four (of whom you shall hear more later) on hand in their blue uniforms to report to the general at the start of the afternoon, the 5 to 7 party got off to a proper and official start; and just as the last of the guests were leaving, the bodyguard gave a small exhibition parade at the foot of the garden, to the music of the Army band.

Perhaps the story of the bodyguard should be told first. It was truly the highlight of the afternoon, and caught the attention of all the guests. The guardsmen, all four of them, range in height from about 4-feet 3 inches to almost 5 feet, and in ages from almost 7 years old to nearly ten . . . And thereby hangs a tale.

When Gen. and Mrs. Marshall first moved into the Chief of Staff's quarters, Mrs. Marshall began to develop garden troubles. Her hedges were broken down, her carefully planted flowers rooted up and general destruction went on constantly in the garden. Four little boys (toughies of the neighborhood) seemed to be ringleaders of the foragers, so one day she caught them and spoke to them seriously.

"Look here," said Mrs. Marshall, "I'm very badly in need of a personal bodyguard, to watch over me and take care of my garden, so I'm going to appoint you four to that position. You guard me and the house and garden, and when anyone comes through the hedge you can throw them out, because you're my guard."

True to her word, she outfitted them in snappy blue uniforms, complete with shiny gold badges and policemen's billies, and the Marshalls have been guarded within an inch of their lives ever since by four young "models of propriety." Yesterday afternoon "the bodyguard" were noticed busily toting around bushel baskets, carefully stuffing them with dropped paper cocktail napkins, keeping the place in spick and span condition, generally, and incidentally getting a bit of ice cream dished out to them on the side now and then.

As cars drew up at the entrance to the Chief of Staff's quarters and were whisked away to parking lots by soldier chauffeurs, guests were received by Mrs. Marshall in the flower-banked drawing room. At the foot of the steps Gen. Marshall welcomed the guests into the garden.

Army Band Plays; Beer Table Popular

Gay music from the Army Band formed the background of conversation for the afternoon, and the ice cream and cake table at the foot of the amphitheater in the garden was a center of much attention. But by far the most popular spot was the arbor back of the quarters where foaming glasses of beer were dispensed and guests helped themselves from a mountain of pretzels in the center of the table.

In the house the dining room was banked with bases of flowers in pastel shades, but the table itself was all in white, lighted with tall tapers and centered with bowls of white tulips and stock.

Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of Admiral Stark, the Chief of Naval Operations; Mrs. H. E. Ely, Mrs. John L. Hines, Mrs. W. D. Connor, Mrs. Merritt W. Ireland, Mrs. Kelly Parsons; Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of Gen. Craig, the former chief of staff; Mrs. Louis Johnson, Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser and Mrs. Fox Conner.

Generally assisting throughout the afternoon were Mrs. A. W. Roffe, Mrs. William C. Crane, Mrs. A. W. Kenner, Mrs. John J. Singer, Mrs. Alex Tupper Wilkes, Mrs. Claude Adams, Mrs. Walton Walker, Mrs. Floyd Parks and Mrs. Carnes Lee.

Miss Molly Pender Brown, daughter of Mrs. Marshall, was in general charge of the assistants. She was gowned in a floor length frock of patriotic color scheme. Fashioned with a sweeping flame colored skirt of taffeta, it had a military cut bodice of white with a jacket of dark blue fastened with gold buttons.

Woodrings Are Among The Early Arrivals

Among early arrivals were the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, she gowned in a severely cut blue crepe frock, topped by a swooping Lillian Russell garden hat.

Brazilian Ambassador Carlos Martins and Mme. Martins were there, as were the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih; the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi, the Argentinian Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza and the Argentine Military Attache, Col. Pedro Zanni, and Senora de Zanni.

Also the Chief of Engineers, Maj. Gen. Julian M. Schley and Mrs. Schley, the Chief of Field Artillery, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, and Mrs. Danford; the Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, Maj. Gen. Walter Baker, and Mrs. Baker, and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John J. Kingman, and their daughter, Miss Jean Kingman.

Others included Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Andrew Moses, the Engineer Commissioner, Col. David McCoach, jr., and Mrs. McCoach; Representative and Mrs. J. Buel Snyder, Ambassador of Thai and Mme. Rajamaitri, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, the Inspector General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Virgil L. Peterson, and Mrs. Peterson, and the Misses Pauletta and Ida Guffey.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Kutz were there, as were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Claude Brigham, Col. and Mrs. Paul X. English, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas O. Robins, Col. and Mrs. Samuel Parker, Capt. and Mrs. Charles S. Mudgett, Capt. and Mrs. Charles W. Stewart, Capt. and Mrs. William Baker, Col. and Mrs. Geoffrey Marshall and hundreds more.

'Senorita, Will You Dance?' Midshipmen Will Ask Tonight

Middies Brush Up on Latin Languages Daughters of Diplomats to Turn On Charm

Dark-eyed senoritas—who have a penchant for heart breaking—will "take over" the Naval Academy tonight at the Pan American ball. The middies, many of whom will cruise down to Rio this summer, will get first hand information on what to do when meeting their southern neighbors face to face.

"Midshipmen who have had special training in the Department of Languages," reads the release from the Naval Academy "are acting as hosts to Latin-American girls from the legations and embassies here as well as those from other cities."

Activities at the ball will be broadcast over short-wave radio to Latin-American countries from 10 until 10:30 p. m.

Capt. and Mrs. E. W. McKee will act as hosts before the ball at a dinner party sponsored by the Navy Athletic Association, when some 40 senoritas, all hailing from below the Rio Grande, will be honor guests. Just to name a few attending are Senoritas Matilda Pastoriza, Eugenia Sosa, Laura Recinos, Beatriz Recinos, Erma Castillo Najera, Maria Eleana Davila, Lola E. Boyd, Mildred S. Boyd, Edith B. Boyd, Elena R. Boyd, Maria Teresa Escalante, Ana Arcaya, Lillian Somoza, Isabella Arcaya, Beatriz Tono, Elza Marques, Lucia del Peon Dolores Conger Sonia Correa, Amy Watts, Marta Watts and Hilda Vallarino.

Many Dinners To Precede Ball

The lucky midshipmen selected for "liaison duty," as the release puts it, are George H. Kronmiller, Herman H. Klare, jr., Miles A. Libbey, David Purdon, jr., William Lattimore, Merlin Paddok and Harold W. Biesemeier. The ball will be given from 9 until 12 p. m. this evening—a climax of the observance of Pan-American Week in Annapolis. Naval and Military representatives from the Latin-American countries and their wives will be honored guests.

A score or more of dinner parties will be given tonight in honor of the Latin American guests. Capt. and Mrs. F. A. L. Vossler will be hosts when their honor guests will be the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Godoy. Comdr. and Mrs. L. H. Thebaud will be hosts to the Air and Military Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Zanni. The Military and Air Attache of Brazilian Embassy and Senora de Machado will attend the ball and preceding the affair will be dinner guests of Capt. and Mrs. James Ware.

Scores of Visitors To Attend Dinners

Capt. and Mrs. H. H. Benson will be hosts to the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Senhora de Araujo. The Naval Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Cortes will be dinner guests of Capt. and Mrs. M. C. Bowman, while the Military Attache and Senora de Alvarez will be guests of Lieut. and Mrs. C. E. Gregerson.

Maj. and Mrs. J. A. Stuart will entertain at dinner tonight when their guests will be the Military Attache of the Colombian Embassy and Senora de Leongomez. Comdr. and Mrs. Roy Dudley will have as their guests, Miss Margarita Montero, Miss Mercedes Guerra and Miss Lolita Dawson. Comdr. and Mrs. J. W. Roper will entertain for the Naval Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Zermeno.

Engaged

MISS PHYLLIS MAURINE STUART,

whose betrothal to William Carter Dulin is announced by her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Frank Meagher Stuart. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Edward M. Dulin. Miss Stuart was graduated from the College of William and Mary and is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Mr. Dulin received his degrees from Western Reserve University and Harvard University graduate school of business administration. The wedding will take place in the early autumn

Cabero Honors Chilean Cadets At Embassy

Diplomatic, Civilian Notables Attend Reception-Tea

Twenty-seven young and handsome Chilean cadets, and their commander, Frederico Maderiaga, met a few local belles as well as a large assortment of officials and diplomats at the tea given yesterday by the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero.

The cadets are from the training ship Maipo, which anchored last week at Baltimore. From there it will go to Vera Cruz before returning to Chile.

Most of the cadets speak only Spanish, but there were enough members of the Latin-American colony present to keep them company. They managed even not to look hot in their heavy uniforms.

Receiving with the hosts were the Naval Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Cortes. They are planning a cocktail party at the Army and Navy Country Club for the cadets.

Chilean Food Is Served

All parties at the Chilean Embassy are festive, and this was no exception. A bar was set up in the wide hall, and in addition to champagne and Scotch and soda, there were two bowls of wine punch.

A huge Chilean cake decorated the buffet in the dining room, and the raspberry sherbet and vanilla icecream added added a summery touch.

Senora de Cabero wore a striking dress—floor length, with a bodice of black taffeta trimmed with a big cluster of roses at the front, and a wide skirt of white eyelet embroidery. The skirt was caught up at the side with a green bow.

The wives of embassy officials were here, there and everywhere, seeing that the cadets were introduced to everyone Senora de Galzitua, wife of the counselor, wore black with touches of white. Senora de Rodriguez was in a sheer frock and a black sailor with a red crown and streamer. Senora de Campbell was another embassy lady assisting at the party.

Among early arrivals was Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State. She wore a pale blue frock fashioned with a pleated skirt, and her hat matched the rest of her costume.

Among the members of the South American diplomatic corps present were the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil. The latter had on a blue print with hat of matching shade trimmed with a long black quill. She topped off her outfit with a short jacket of blue fox.

The Brazilian Envoy and Senhora de Martins arrived, Senhora de Martins smart in a brown and white polka dotted dress and matching turban. The Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos was also glimpsed threading his way through the crowd.

Navy Folk At Party

Early arrivals were the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas, the latter in black with a brief silver fox cape.

Many from Navy circles had been asked to greet the visitors. Mrs. Thomas Holcomb and Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettingill were there, Mrs. Pettingill wearing a green wool suit and a jaunty cap to match.

Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles chatted with friends, Mrs. Miles in gray with a smart white straw sailor.

Senora de Escalante, wife of the Venezuelan Ambassador, in blue, was accompanied by her pretty daughter, in pink. The Ambassador is now on a trip to his homeland.

Mrs. Sol Bloom arrived after having attended the garden party given by the Chief of Staff and Mrs. George Marshall at their home in Fort Myer. Mrs. Bloom was in navy blue with a broad-brimmed hat trimmed with white. The guests also included Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, who left after the party to spend the week-end in Charleston, S. C.

Dancer's Fete Is Postponed

As the cast of "Louisiana Purchase" is working night and day getting the show in shape for its New York opening, Mrs. Richard Buchanan has postponed indefinitely the party she was to have given tonight at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of her talented daughter, Aleen Stuart.

The young lady has, of course, been forced out of the Washington run of the show, as she is only 17 years old. But she has been staying down at the theater to pose for pictures for New York release and to watch the show, so told her mother that she didn't feel like a big party. However, with a beau she will go to Chevy Chase for the semiweekly dance tonight.

Mrs. Buchanan will accompany her daughter to Philadelphia for the opening on Monday and will then go to New York for the first performance in Manhattan on May 28.

Owen J. Robertses To Leave for Farm

Associate Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts will leave today for their farm, Bryncoed, near Kemberton, Pa.

Although Justice Roberts will return to the Supreme Court on Monday, Mrs. Roberts will remain in Pennsylvania until next fall. She will be joined by Justice Roberts this summer when the court adjourns.

Stellita Stapleton To Be Host Tomorrow

Miss Stellita Stapleton has cards out for a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon at her home on Massachusetts avenue in honor of Frank Hamilton.

Mr. Hamilton is coming to Washington this week-end to attend the Coelebs dance tonight at the Potomac Boat Club. The Coelebs are a group of gay young bachelors who meet once a week for dinner.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MRS. WILLIAM BEVERLY MASON, JR., and her young son "Billy" have returned to the Mason apartment in Washington after a visit of several weeks to Mrs. Mason's father and stepmother, Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Cary Randolph, at Grafton, near Upperville. While Mr. Mason was out of town on business, his wife came to Virginia for the last part of the hunting season and stayed on to attend the spring race meetings.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Mason and their son will come to Virginia in June in time for the Upperville Horse Show. Mrs. Mason, the former Miss Dorothy Willing Randolph, is a tall blonde, with brown eyes and a stunning figure. She is one of the most expert young horsewomen of Virginia and will motor down to Foxcroft School on Monday to ride in the Alumnae Class, when the "old girls" will compete for the Davis Challenge Cup.

Mrs. Mason attended the luncheon given on Wednesday by Miss Charlotte Noland in honor of alumnae of the school from Washington and Richmond. Mrs. Samuel Beach and Mrs. Richard Shand were other Washingtonians present.

THIS IS PREAKNESS Day—and to Maryland and Virginia horsemen and flat-racing fans the most important day of the season.

It's also the golden anniversary of the Preakness, for, although you may hear it's the forty-ninth running, this is inreality the fiftieth. That's because in 1918 there were so many entries that the officials at Pimlico decided to run the race in two divisions.

THE PREAKNESS STAKES, which goes back to 1873, has been a feature of the Pimlico program for so long that it needs no introduction. But many wonder how the race got its name. It seems that in 1870 a horse named for the little town in New Jersey, Preakness, had won the Dinner Party Stakes, a Pimlico race which had received wide publicity. The Governor of Maryland at that time, Gov. Bowie, who also headed the directors of the Maryland Jockey Club, took up with other officials the matter of preserving in a fitting manner the name of the great horse who had won the first big race at Pimlico, then a new track.

SO THUS the Preakness Stakes was originated, and the Dinner Party Stakes later was changed to the Dixie Handicap, an event still run annually in the spring at Pimlico.

The first Preakness Stakes was won by Survivor. The race was run annually until 1889 and then discontinued until 1909. It has been run each spring since that time.

The Preakness is a historic and colorful event, and today a vast crowd of well-dressed, good-looking people is sure to be there hoping to pick the winner.

THE FAUQUIER-LOUDOUN Polo Club will play the first game of the season this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Marshall Field, between two picked teams of the club. Beginning next week they will play four games each week—on Tuesdays and Saturdays at Marshall and Thursdays and Sundays at Goose Creek field.

Miss Mary Rumsey, of New York, is at her estate near The Plains.

Mrs. Walter Salmon, jr., of New York, arrived yesterday to visit her sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Duffey, jr., for several weeks at her home, Mountain Spring Farm, near Halfway.

Mrs. Douglas Hostess at First Of Luncheon Series

Mrs. William O. Douglas entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in her Silver Spring home, the event being the first of two such parties she has planned for this season. The second will take place on Monday.

Apple blossoms and redbud centered the table at which covers were laid for 10. An air of informality accented the gathering, which was made up largely of official hostesses. The ranking guest was Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Others there were Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Walter Louchheim, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, Miss Minnie Mae Fleming and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

Invitations Out For Community Chest League Fair

Amusing invitations, showing silhouetted figures dancing around a May pole, have been issued to the Community Chest League's Country Fair on May 21 on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., 4300 Massachusetts avenue.

The fete will be held from 2 to 6, weather permitting. If it should rain, the fair will take place the next day. Five hundred children from Chest agencies will give a program of singing, dancing, and display acquired skills.

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed is chairman of the league, assisted by Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mrs. James Clement Dunn and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis.

The reception committee includes Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. David S. Barry, Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Robert C. Watson, Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer, Mrs. Lloyd B. Wilson, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper and many others.

Maryland Party Today Will Fete Nancy du Pont

Mr. and Mrs. Lacey Reynolds will entertain at a cocktail party from 5 until 7 o'clock this afternoon at their home, Greenacres, in Maryland.

Guests of honor will be Mr. Reynolds' brother, Glasgow Reynolds, and his fiancee, Miss Nancy duPont, of Wilmington, whose father, Eugene E. du Pont, will also be in town for the party. The marriage will take place on May 18 in Wilmington, where the couple will make their home.

With Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds for several weeks is Mr. Reynolds' mother, Mrs. Lacey Reynolds, sr., who is here from Nashville, Tenn.

The Dicks Home From Hawaii

Mr. and Mrs. C. Matthews Dick have returned to this country after several months in Hawaii, but will not open their Massachusetts avenue home here. Instead they will spend the spring in New York and will leave June 1 for a season at Newport.

Mrs. Dick was in Washington briefly on Thursday. She and Mr. Dick are week-ending in New York with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Douglas, with whom they shared a house in Honolulu.

Envoy Cromwell To Rest in Hawaii After Retiring

The retiring United States Minister to Canada and Mrs. James Cromwell plan to vacation at their beautiful home in Hawaii before Mr. Cromwell returns to New Jersey to open his campaign for the United States Senatorship.

Mrs. Cromwell, the former Doris Duke, recently left Ottawa by private plane for her estate in Somerville, N. J., and is not expected to return to Canada. Mr. Cromwell will go to Aiken, S. C., later this month to attend the graduation of his daughter, Christine, from the Fermata School.

The Fahnestocks Hosts at Tea

Several friends dropped in for tea yesterday afternoon at the Georgetown home of Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock. They were friends of Miss Fontaine Fahnestock, daughter of Mr. Fahnestock, who has been here for several days from New York.

Miss Fahnestock, who made her debut here several seasons ago, will return to New York today. She plans to come down for a longer visit around the first of June to take part in debutante festivities.

Announce Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson, of Takoma Park, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Winifred Robinson, to Armando di Girolamo. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 1, at Trinity Episcopal Church in Takoma Park.

The Villarets Twice Dinner Hosts in Week

Colonel and Wife Have Leased Residence and Will Move in June

Col. and Mrs. Eugene Villaret have leased the residence at 3525 Springland lane and will move into their new home the first part of June.

Col. and Mrs. Villaret have had as their guests for the past week George Hinman, well-known journalist, and Mrs. Hinman, of Mount Morris, N. Y. They entertained for them at dinner recently at the Army and Navy Country Club, when among the other guests were a group of friends whom the Villarets knew during the years they lived in Paris.

They included the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp, Col. and Mrs. Robert Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege.

The Villarets also entertained at dinner earlier in the week for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph A. Green. Others in the company were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Parker, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Hinman.

Helen Wheeler Becomes Bride

Wearing lotus blue chiffon instead of the traditional white, Miss Helen W. Wheeler was married yesterday afternoon at 4 to W. Bert Johnson.

The ceremony took place at The Parrot, in a setting of palm, ferns, and white roses and lilacs. The bride's gown was trimmed with white paillettes and she wore a matching horsehair hat with a shoulder-length veil. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Wilma Poyner served as maid of honor, wearing rose marquisette embroidered in white and carrying talisman roses. Russell Smith was best man and the ushers were William W. Wheeler, of Oshkosh, the bride's brother, and Henry K. Armstrong. Reginald Mallett, jr., whose father, the Rev. Mallett, of Baltimore, performed the ceremony, was ring bearer.

A reception followed the wedding, after which the couple left on a honeymoon to White Sulphur Springs. As her going away costume the bride wore light gray Jeroma crepe with appliqued motifs of the same material and a corsage of red roses. They will make their home at 1726 Connecticut avenue.

The bride is the duaghter of Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Wheeler, of Oshkosh, and Mr. Johnson is the son of Mrs. W. A. Johnson, of Birmingham, Ala.

Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Margaret Johnson, Mr. Johnson's sister, and Mrs. J. J. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keefe, Mrs. Charles Nolan and Miss Alice Nielsen, all of Oshkosh.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Distrusts Daughter's Beau, Because He's One Of 10 Children; Thinks This Proves Hereditary Lack of Common Sense and Self-Control

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter, 18, is very much in love with a boy her own age, which pleases her father but worries me. I have nothing against the lad, except that he is one of 10 children, a fact which seems to me to indicate lack of common sense and self-control on the part of his parents. It also means that he will have to work early in life, instead of obtaining the cultural benefits of college training. His family is poor and ignorant.

It will be at least five years before these youngsters can marry, and even then it would be a financial struggle. Yet the boy's parents are—(as I see it; trynig to look at the situation impersonally)—really sort of "egging them on," because of the vicarious "kick" they get out of it. However, I believe they are entirely unaware of this hidden motive, as they do adore my only daughter. She is the apple of their eye.

It seems to me she needs a variety of interests and more friends among boys her own age. Her father says he's glad she's not a flirt, and that one boy friend is safer. We've talked this over just enough for each to know where the other stands, and naturally I want to see both sides. But I also want my girl to get the most out of life.

Since there isn't a chance that they can marry for at least five years, don't you think there is danger in their being sweethearts rather than friends? I realize that insofar as emotions are concerned, individuals are differently constructed. And while I am not intentionally casting aspersions on the boy's character or self-control, I see the possibility, in long engagements, of inexperienced young persons' emotions getting out of control, no matter how good their intentions may be.

Isn't young love a lot like wine, requiring more and more to satisfy as time goes on? And aren't young folks thoughtless of consequences? I'm sure my husband thinks I'm a typical worried "hen with one chick," and thus I hesitate to broach my side of it to him again, unless I am sure I'm right. But I can't go blithely singing in a fool's paradise, happy in the obvious present happiness of my daughter, if she is laying up future trouble for herself.

I realize when two young people love each other, it takes a lot less money to live happily than middle aged, comfort-loving parents think it does. But somehow I feel that my daughter's present course of action is not making for future happiness in all its fullness. I want her to know all the joys of marriage and motherhood, but frankly I'm worried about this petting business.

If my worries are justified, how can I warn her without making her feel that I don't trust her? It is human emotion at youthful pitch that I distrust—and not my girl. WORRIED MOTHER.

Classic Example Of 'Borrowing Trouble'

DEAR W. M.: I suppose you have heard of "borrowing trouble." Well, that is what you are doing. Thoughts create, we are told; and morbid anticipation of "the worst," so-called, has evil power to bring that "worst" to pass even as joyous expectancy of good brings forth fruit after its kind. What of the Biblical character who moaned, "The thing I greatly feared hath come upon me?" Who is to say that his disaster was not the inevitable "outpicturing" of his destructively melancholy thought?

Shakespeare remarked, "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." And the more I reflect upon his remark, the more I believe he meant it in the mystical sense. Granted, however, that even the most optimistic, right thinking, right living individuals are sometimes confronted by misfortune or heartbreak at various turns in the road of life—still, I think the jaunty philosophy of the Irish, who say, "It's time enough to bid the devil good morning when you meet him," is the best armor against such onslaughts.

There is, in my opinion, something decadent and definitely "wrong thinking" about the person who cannot conceive of love between man and maid except in terms of sexual surrender. Such surrender outside of marriage is the exception rather than the rule amongst youthful sweethearts of normal mentality and happy upbringing; and if an impression to the contrary exists in the minds of many in both the elder and younger generations, I think it is due to a great deal of non-constructive latter day publicity attendant upon social investigation of the exceptional cases.

Your theory that the boy's parents lack "common sense and self control," else they never would have begot a family of ten children, is distressingly cynical in the modern selfish wiseacre manner. It is also unconsciously humorless—although bound to evoke a smile from the reader.

If they can be generous enough to adore your daughter, who possesses, I assume, some of her mother's traits, then I think you can afford to be equally generous toward their son—particularly since he seems to have won your husband's approval without a struggle. It is not at all to your credit, you know, to condemn them as "poor and ignorant," only because none of them have been exposed to the debatable "cultural benefits of college training."

They may have riches you wot not of—in the fields of wisdom, character and kindness. Ignorant, indeed, is he who thinks book learning is synonymous with noble spirit. The discerning eye of the real aristocrat looks beneath the surface to see "nature's nobleman" in the "diamond in the rough."

My advice to you is to be as glad as your husband about the romance. Give it the sunshine treatment. It may wear itself out, if let alone. And then again, it may not. But it's downright evil of you to visualize it as a tragic drama, with your daughter the witless prey of stalking disaster. Don't try to innoculate her against unmoral temptation by flustered, worried warnings. If her moral and social "conditioning," up to this point, isn't sufficient to keep her to a safe and sane course, fussbudget interference from you will not help. Somehow, I think her father's attitude will see her through. Let us hope she has inherited some of his poised common sense. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Mothers Can Best Please Children Tomorrow By Looking Attractive; Simple Measures Help

Through careful grooming and correct make-up, Mrs. Hettie Lewis, shown above with her daughter, Diane Lewis, Metro-Goldwyn actress, preserves the beauty and dignity of a mother. Frequent shampoos keep her white hair soft and in condition for a becoming, modish coiffure. Her cosmetics are in pastel tones, while Diane's are vivid and darker to harmonize with her youthful skin

Should Not Neglect Appearance in Zeal To Be Good Housekeepers; Sleep and Rest Are Foundation of Beauty for Maturity

By Carolyn Abbott.

CHILDREN past the age of 16 are much more concerned over their mothers' appearance than they are their ability to bake a perfect cake. When they gather to pay homage May 12—Mother's Day—they prefer a pretty mother to a delectable feast.

They don't expect their mothers to be copies of fashion plates, but they do want them to be attractive in their own right. Often in their efforts to be model housekeepers mothers neglect their appearance.

A little forethought, some simple home treatments are all they need to keep their looks topnotch. Face beauty depends largely upon sleep, proper cleansing, correct make-up and an alert, happy attitude. Adequate sleep and rest are just as necessary for the mother as the child.

Natural Oils Decrease

Natural oils in the skin decrease with age. Often the complexion becomes sallow, splotched with brown or black spots. Sometimes it takes on a ruddy, flushed glow, but more frequently it gets pallid. Therefore the woman, be she mother or spinster, past 45 should learn to apply make-up expertly. But first she must get her skin in good condition.

The skin should be cleansed thoroughly two or three times daily. Use a complexion brush to stir up the circulation and to keep the muscles firm. If the skin is dry use a cleansing cream instead of soap and water. Also replenish the natural oils with creams. Use a good lubricating cream each night and leave it on while bathing or sleeping.

In addition to the daily routine an occasional special treatment is excellent to quicken circulation and wake up a sallow, sluggish skin. There is a good skin clearing cream that will eliminate that yellowish, grayish look. Also it will banish those brown or muddy splotches on the face. A mask treatment is almost a necessity for the mother of grown-up children. Here is a home remedy that is inexpensive and easily applied. After a thorough cleansing, spread honey over the face and neck and tap with the fingers. The honey will stick to the fingertips and pull the skin slightly. When this is removed it will leave the skin looking young and feeling smooth.

More than at any other age, make-up should be applied expertly. Nothing embarrasses children more than to see their mother's cosmetics stand out, emphasizing every defect in her face. An older woman's make-up should look natural, never obvious. Usually pastel or shell pink make-up is most flattering to the woman around 45 or 50. This, however, depends upon the natural tones of the skin. Florid complexions need little or no cheek rouge. Face powder for this type should be on the pinkish side, but sufficiently dark to prevent a pasty, splotched effect. Lipstick should harmonize with the natural skin. A medium dark or one of the luscious pinky-red lipsticks is advisable.

For Pallid Skins

Skins that have a yellowish cast, ranging from pallid to yellow or brown, should have a powder darker than the skin itself. It ought to have life and color. A decidedly sallow, dark skin needs clear red or orange-red rouge, dark powder with enough red in it to give a healthy glow. Pale, sallow skins with blue, gray or green eyes should have a rather light, bluish-rose rouge, powder in pink or peach tones. Both rouge and lipstick should be chosen to bring animation to the features, but blatant or too vivid color gives the face a hard, cheap look.

Your Figure, Madame!

Circulation Holds Key to Good Health, Especially for Persons Past 30

EVERYBODY knows that circulation is the old, reliable fountain of youth. But most of you regard it as nature's job and no concern of yours. That is all right as long as you are young and active . . . the circulation goes briskly about its business, cheeks are pink and life is merry.

But after 30 years or so, a little cooperation on your part is obligatory. If you are to look and feel beautifully well, the circulation must continue to function efficiently. Allow it to become sluggish and all the magic of make-up, a fashionable coiffure and fine feathers can't obscure a sallow skin, lifeless hair and a generally down-at-heels appearance.

Many Ways to Help

It's the circulation of blood through the body that supplies the tissues with oxygen from the lungs and food materials from the digestive tract. It also transports the waste materials to the elimination system. The rapidity of this transportation is a good guage of the efficiency of the circulation.

You can do a great many things to help the circulation along. For one thing, avoid garments which bind a tight band about the waist, tight garters, or an extremely tight brassiere. Anyone who stands all day should be particularly careful to avoid binding clothes.

There are a number of ways of stimulating the circulation . . . the person who stands a great deal of the time benefits by hot and cold foot baths, rubbing the feet with a good stiff bath brush, and resting with the feet propped up. The last is excellent for relieving congestion in feet and ankles.

Massage is of great value in stimulating the circulation and in improving the muscle tone. When you are too weary to do anything else, have a good body massage. The person who is overworked should try to have a massage twice a week.

Exercise Big Help

Muscular activity, however, is of greatest value in accelerating the blood flow. The contraction and relaxation of the muscles constitute a pumping action which is a powerful factor in good nutrition.

Any exercise benefits the circulation, but to counteract the effects of gravity it is a good plan to take some of your exercises in a lying down position, as in the following:

Lie on the side on the floor with the legs extended straight down and one on top of the other. Flex the top leg, bringing knee toward chest, then shoot it straight out from the hip. Flex the leg again, then straighten to downward position. Do the exercise very slowly and repeat ten times before changing sides.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Broadway Goes Sentimental as Jolson Steps Out With Ex-Wife

New York, May 10.

BROADWAY'S boys and girls enjoy a hearty guffaw as often as possible, but I always think they would prefer to sob softly into their lemonade. The street's denizens do not wear their hearts on their sleeves, but plastered all over their shirt-fronts and bodices. So you can imagine the dust that was raised when Al Jolson, renowned mammy singer, entered a night club with his divorced spouse, Ruby Keeler, in tow.

ALICE HUGHES

The conversational buzz could be heard above the crash of falling crockery. "Did they make up?" "Ain't that sweet?" "Bet it's a gag!" Were just a few of the exclamations that rose through the pall of cigarette smoke. Many thought they saw history being made, before their very eyes.

Like most Times Square minstrels and comedians, Al is extremely sentimental in affairs of the heart. His marriage to Ruby was his second, and his love for his younger bride was almost idolatrous. When it went askew he carried the torch up and down, though I doubt that he outwept George Jessel after he was divorced by Norma Talmadge—another great show business romance.

And beholding Al and Ruby sitting side by side were Jessel and his child bride, the former Lois Andrews—and beaming, undoubtedly. Two of the town's brightest torches seemed to doused, at least for the time being. Others in the room were Brenda Frazier and her current escort, "Shipwreck" Kelly. Another great Broadway romanticist unfortunately absent was Eddie Cantor, a performer of the same vintage, but happily married these many years to his Ida.

George Jessel And Child Bride Beam on Couple

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In the gayest parts of town are many of the unhappiest people. That's unusual, isn't it? They are those cut off from news of kinfolk in their homelands now taken over by Herr Hitler's Moving Men, Inc. There's great Kirsten Flagstad, of the Met, whose home is near Oslo. And there's the beautiful ballerina, Zorina, whose real name is Brigita Hartwig, whose people have a home near Trondheim. And all over this broad land are many thousands in just such an unhappy plight. All we can give them is prayers, and tears—and freedom.

Wonder if it is really true that the Metropolitan Opera has signed young Deanna Durbin of the films, to start during the season of 1941? It may well be, but I wonder if it is smart, because I too well remember the ill-advised forcing and whoopla when young Marion Talley came out of Kansas some 16 years ago with jewels in her throat.

U. S. Worried As War Perils Vital Supplies

Trade Chiefs Confer On Dutch Indies Tin and Rubber

By Felix Cotten
Post Staff Writer

Administration officials were concerned yesterday over the possible effect of the latest German blitzkrieg on two of American industry's lifelines—its supply sources of rubber and tin.

They agreed, moreover, that the likely immediate result will be a reduction, if not a cutting off, of this country's $174,000,000-a-year export trade to Holland and Belgium, a large part of which consists of farm products. What the ultimate effect will be, it was pointed out, will depend on the uncertainties of the war.

If rubber and tin sources are affected, authoritative sources said, it undoubtedly will be because the German invasion has scattered the flames of war to the Dutch East Indies, producers along with other areas in the Middle East of the world's best tin and 95 per cent of its rubber.

Japan has long gazed covetously on the islands, rich in oil as well as other highly important "strategic" materials. There have been definite indications from Tokyo that she contemplated pouncing on them, if Germany moved into the Low Countries.

Japan Takes a Hint

A sharply worded warning by Secretary Hull last month was believed by well-informed persons to have induced Japan to follow a hands-off policy. Recent indications from Tokyo have tended to confirm this belief.

It was significant, however, that the threat to rubber and tin sources was pondered at a hurriedly called conference yesterday between Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and other Commerce Department officials.

Information assembled at this meeting, and at a subsequent conference between Hopkins and heads of his Business Advisory Council, was submitted to the President at the Cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon.

Hopkins canceled all vacations and leaves for his trade experts. They were instructed to keep him posted on all developments in their respective fields.

$1,312,000,000 "Frozen"

Treasury officials, meanwhile, starting work at break of dawn, streamlined the machinery for handling bank accounts and investments in this country of nationals of the five recently invaded countries. They got out an order freezing Dutch, Belgian and Luxembourg wealth, estimated at $1,312,000,000, before the banks opened yesterday morning. Withdrawals are permitted only by licenses granted by the Treasury.

In order to facilitate routine transaction, a series of general licenses was issued.

One sidelight on the universal fear of further blitzkriegs was the fact that Rumanian Minister Radu Irimsecu and Swiss Minister Charles Bruggmann were among the diplomatic representatives calling on Acting Secretary of the Treasury Gaston. The subject discussed is believed to have been the general question of the protection afforded foreign wealth located in this country.

The United States, it was learned, has on hand enough rubber and tin to last its industries about three or four months. If war should be extended to the Dutch East Indies, the question would arise as to whether these islands would be included in the neutrality combat zone, from which American ships are barred.

Threat to U. S. Industries

Invasion of the Low Countries placed the mighty Dutch merchant fleet, or a substantial part of it, at the mercy of belligerents. This further interference with the world's shipping facilities operates as a restriction on American foreign trade, particularly with the invaded countries themselves.

The Dutch East Indies supply about one-seventh of the world's tin and two-fifths of its rubber. Removal from production of one-seventh of the tin would threaten supplies for American industries, it is explained, since tin production is closely geared to consumption.

Tourist Guides Get 'Lecture' By Police Head

Between 35 and 40 tourist guides received a pep talk from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, yesterday and were warned "to change their ways."

Meeting in the roll call room at police headquarters, the guides listened to a lecture regarding their conduct.

"Recently," Brown stated afterward, "I have received numerous complaints about guides on the street. I just wanted to talk to them."

Brown said he explained to the men that the regulations governing guides must be observed, and told them to refrain from congregating on street corners and soliciting out-of-town cars.

Station PDS Presents Tenor as Guest

A tenor from Greenbelt, Md., who sings secular and religious music, will broadcast over Station WMAL this morning on the PDS program. He is Mr. Dwight H. Trucksess. Mr. Trucksess has had six years of professional experience with musical shows such as "The Student Prince," "Castles in the Air" and "Gilbert and Sullivan." He is now singing at the Ninth Street Christian Church.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

D. Sterling Wheelwright and the choir of Washington Chapel of Latter Day Saints present a program Friday ight honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd R. Harris.

As a tribute to one of his soprano choristers who is leaving the city, D. Sterling Wheelwright, organist and choirmaster of Washington Chapel of Latter Day Saints, turned his regular recital last evening into a concert in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd R. Harris. His share of the program consisted of Bach's toccata and fuge in D minor, a transcription of Debussy's "The Lass With the Lint-White Hair," and a new suite of "Bible Poems" by Jaromir Weinberger, played here for the first time.

BROWN

To make the occasion a pleasant remembrance for their departing colleague, the choir sang five compositions: Schuetky's "Send Forth Thy Spirit," Chesnokov's "Salvation Is Created," Christiansen's "Praise To the Lord" and "Lost In the Night," and Franck's setting of Psalm CL. The voice of Mrs. Harris was joined with the others in this well-balanced group of singers whose readings had precision of attack and polyphonic clarity. The honored soprano was heard alone in Verdi's "Pace, mio Dio" and Puccini's "Un bel di'" and sang these arias with a tone notable for its firmness and purity.

Mr. Wheelwright's performance of the Bach toccata and fugue was spirited and brilliant. One's interest in his offerings was centered upon the Weinberger suite, for new organ works are always welcome to the curious listener. The Weinberger familiar to the public in excerpts from "Svanda Dudak" and the variations on "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree" would not be recognized in the short tone-poems which have a spiritual and affecting quality.

"Jesus Walking on the Sea" and "The Marriage in Cana of Galilee," are descriptive in character with a rich harmonic fabric. The thematic ideas are concise and worked out with skill. The memorable numbers, however, are "Blessed in the King of Israel," "The Last Supper" and "Hear, Israel, the Lord our God is One God." In them one feels a mystical motivation and an aspiring sincerity of emotion.

Dr. Robert Howe Harmon directs the Glee Club of George Washington University in their twenty-first annual concert Friday night in the Willard Hotel ballroom.

An audience predominantly youthful filled the Willard Hotel ballroom last evening for the annual spring concert by the glee clubs of George Washington University. Dr. Robert Howe Harmon, whose enthusiasm for music is a leavening force among the students, was at his accustomed place on the podium, as was Mrs. Grace R. Harmon at the piano. The program moved with zest, and there was no question about the enjoyment of the singers in displaying the results of their training.

The combined clubs began with Warren's "National Hymn," Bortnianski's "A Voice to Heaven Sounding," Arcadelt's "Ave Maria" and an arrangement of Sullivan's "The Lost Chord." The Arcadelt number was particularly well done with a good blending of tones and careful shading.

In the second group of songs, the men's club was heard in the traditional Dutch "Prayer of Thanksgiving," an arrangement of Handel's "Where'er You Walk," Speiser's "The Merry Frogs," Protheroe's "Shadow March," an arrangement of Brahms' "Wiegenlied," Smith's "Secrets" and David Guion's "Home on the Range."

The women's club paid a compliment to Adolf Torovski, resident composer, by placing his "Softly the Stars" in their group, singing this delightfully melodic chorus with delicacies of tone. Other numbers were Silver's arrangement of the Irish air from County Derry, the barcarolle from Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," Grieg's "Elfin Dance," Rakhmaninov's "Lilacs" and Friml's "Gianina Mia."

In the concluding group the two organizations joined again in Schuetky's "Emitte Spiritum," Christiansen's "Beautiful Savior," Lincke's "The Glow Worm" and Rubinstein's "Kamenoi-Ostrov."

Labor Coercion In K.C. Charged By Dubinsky

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, yesterday credited a Kansas City factory whose counsel is former Senator James A. Reed with invention of "a brand new type of industrial unionism."

The labor leader charged that the Donnelly Garment Co., headed by Reed's wife, coerced its employes into joining a company-dominated union which included "managers, supervisors and instructors — everybody except the president."

Dubinsky testified before the House Committee Investigating the National Labor Relations Board, in reply to testimony by Reed last Saturday regarding the garment workers union's attempts to organize the Donnelly plant.

Reed, who had told the committee that ILGWU organizers threatened violence to Donnelly workers if they did not join the union, heard Dubinsky deliver his four-hour attack on Donnelly labor policies, marked by frequent clashes with Representatives Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, and Routzohn (Republican), of Ohio.

Smith told the witness, "You and Senator Reed both claim to protect the workers. It's a matter of court record that your organizers stripped a woman in the streets in Memphis. What kind of protection is that?"

"Our union is opposed to violence in labor disputes," Dubinsky replied.

The chairman broke in to ask sharply: "But these atrocities did happen, didn't they?"

"Yes, yes, they did happen," shouted Dubinsky, leveling his forefinger at Smith. "And I'll tell you something else that happened. An employer pulled a gun and shot a worker in New York yesterday. That happened. The worker is dead."

Dubinsky denied that ILGWU organizers in Kansas City attempted to coerce Donnelly workers into joining the union by threatening them with "the same sort of thing that happened in Memphis."

Culbertson Urges Americas To Cooperate

Scientific Congress Told Way Is Open To Better Living

William S. Culbertson, Washington lawyer, economist and former Ambassador to Chile, yesterday called for complete understanding and economic cooperation between the United States and her sister republics to the south.

Culbertson's address, the first of hundreds which will be given before the eighth American Scientific Congress, was delivered at the opening session of the section on economics and sociology at the Freer Gallery of Art.

None of the other ten sections convened yesterday. This morning the groups on education and public health will meet for the first time in a joint session in the Public Health Service auditorium.

Biologists Meet Today

Other sections launching their programs today are those on biological sciences, 9:30 a. m. at the National Academy of Sciences Building; agriculture and conservation, 9:30 a. m. in the Agriculture Department auditorium; history and geography, 10 a. m., National Academy of Sciences, and international law, 9:30 a. m., Hotel Mayflower.

No scientific sessions will be held tomorrow. Monday will mark the opening of symposiums on anthropology, biology, physical and chemical sciences and statistics.

After long delay, in comparison with some European peoples, the Americas are making good progress in appreciating that they are interdependent, Culbertson told the inaugural meeting yesterday.

"Resources and business opportunities are everywhere in the Americas," he said. "We should transform them into higher standards of living and into national strength for each of the American States."

Hulls to Give Reception

The speaker emphasized the necessity of "inter-American economic cooperation undisturbed by selfish local politics and secure under universally accepted laws of justice and fair dealing."

Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and secretary general of the scientific conference, said late yesterday that approximately 400 Latin-American scholars had registered so far. At least 2,500 United States scientists are expected to attend the sessions, which will continue here through May 17.

Delegates will visit Mount Vernon this afternoon and the official reception by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will be held at the Pan American Building at 9 p. m. Tomorrow will be devoted to exploration of Luray Caverns.

Secretary Hull will deliver the address of welcome at the first plenary session Monday in the Pan American Building. Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, also will speak.

Chain Store Tax Opponents Rest Case at House Quiz

By the Associated Press

Opponents of the Patman chain store tax bill concluded presentation of their case before a House Ways and Mean subcommittee yesterday.

One of the final objectors was the distribution department committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It advised the House groups that the bill would affect a quarter of the Nation's retail business adversely and would open the way for use of the same taxing power to pronounce a "death sentence' upon any type of business.

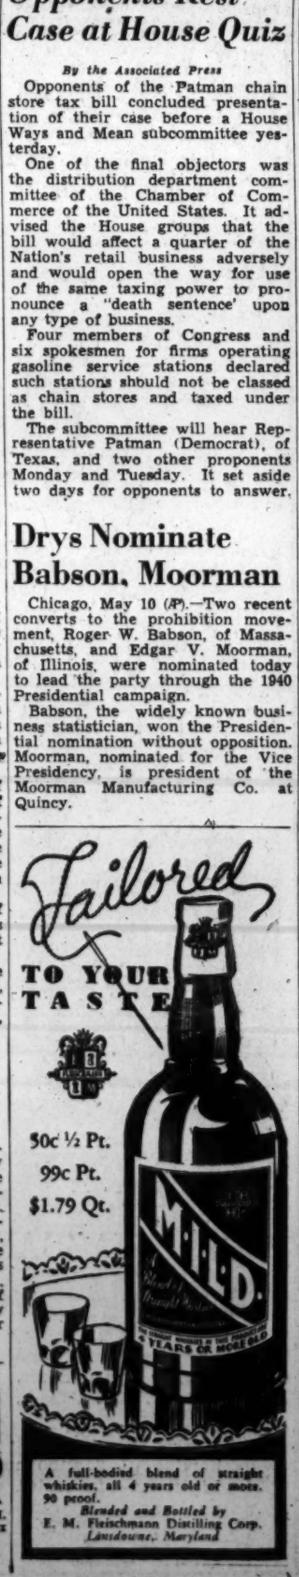
Four members of Congress and six spokesmen for firms operating gasoline service stations declared such stations shbuld not be classed as chain stores and taxed under the bill.

The subcommittee will hear Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, and two other proponents Monday and Tuesday. It set aside two days for opponents to answer.

Drys Nominate Babson, Moorman

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—Two recent converts to the prohibition movement, Roger W. Babson, of Massachusetts, and Edgar V. Moorman, of Illinois, were nominated today to lead the party through the 1940 Presidential campaign.

Babson, the widely known business statistician, won the Presidential nomination without opposition. Moorman, nominated for the Vice Presidency, is president of the Moorman Manufacturing Co. at Quincy.



Plot to Kidnap Wilhelmina Reported Foiled

By the Associated Press

New York, May 10.—Two squadrons of Nazi planes, loaded with soldiers, were said today by Edwin Hartrich, Amsterdam correspondent for C. B. S., to have made a "daring attempt to capture Queen Wilhelmina," an attempt which evidently "has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators."

[From Amsterdam, International News Service reported Dutch authorities said there was no evidence to substantiate reports of a German attempt to kidnap Queen Wilhelmina.—Editor's note.]

The text of his cable from Amsterdam to C. B. S. follows:

"A daring attempt of the German air force to capture Queen Wilhelmina in the early hours today apparently has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators.

"A flight of 16 large Junkers and possibly more landed at the airport of Valkenburg, 5 miles from the Queen's summer villa at Ruygenhoek and about 7 miles from her residence, Huis Ten Bosch, in the outskirts of The Hague. Each Junker carried 20 soldiers or more. All were equipped with automatic rifles or machine guns. The planes landed in the early hours of the morning.

Others Land at Delft

"Other contingents of aerial kidnapers landed at Delft, about 4 miles south of The Hague. The strategy was to cut off The Hague from the rest of Holland surrounding the capital city and capture the government, even if only for a few hours.

"Together with Norman Alley, American newsreel man who was on the U. S. S. Panay when the gunboat was bombed by Japanese planes, and Beach Conger, of the New York Herald Tribune, I bumped into a hot-pitched battle on the outskirts of Valkenburg.

"Driving behind some military lorries on the Amsterdam-Hague road, our chauffeur was stopped along with the lorries by a sudden burst of machine gun fire. Across the road in the ditches and at the bridgeheads Dutch soldiers were replying with short bursts aimed at a small group of farm houses.

Snipers Set Planes Afire

"In this battle of the tulip fields, which had been going on since 7 in the morning, ten of the 16 planes had been set on fire by the Dutch snipers. Tracer bullets ripped through the aluminum fuselages, setting the gas tanks on fire.

"The smoke from this bonfire drifted like a huge black shadow high into the sunny sky.

"Fifteen thousand feet up above the tulip fields three Heinkel bombers leisurely circled in and out of the white bursts of anti-aircraft fire, methodically dumping their cargos on the tiny battlefield below.

"In The Hague area, Messerschmidt planes were strafing the Dutch mobilized columns on the roads. Hundreds of soldiers were sent out as flying squadrons in high-powered Lincoln Mercury's, equipped with machine guns and automatic rifles. They are taking care of German parachutists and receive their orders from couriers in motor cars.

"And from what I saw this morning, this new type of aerial blitzkrieg was being effectively handled by the mobile defense of the Dutch, rolling around the countryside on wheels. But the story is still to be collected. Communications in Holland are all in the hands of the military. No telephoning is permitted, even within the city of Amsterdam."

U. S. Seeks Personnel 'Magic Plan'

Sen. Ellender Opens Quiz on Working Problems of 600,000 Federal Employes

The Government's infant personnel program showed up as a child prodigy with a future, in its first public appearance yesterday.

The program was described for four hours by about 30 of its directors, while Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, asked details about how employes are and should be treated.

At one point, Ellender, chairman of the special committee which has been investigating the civil service for more than a year, applauded current personnel work. He announced, however, that he will continue the quiz of personnel chiefs at 10 a. m. Monday.

Officials Outline Aims

In the group were officials in charge of personnel programs affecting some 600,000 Federal employes. They told what they have been working for since the President set up the personnel offices in June, 1938. They described main causes of employes grievances, and discussed a "magic formula" for curing them.

Oliver C. Short, personnel director of the Commerce Department, said the "magic formula" was to train first-line supervisors to handle human problems on the job.

He told about a $1,620 section supervisor who thought he should speak to employes only when he gave orders.

"I sat across the table and talked to him several times," said Short. "I had no authority to change him, but he's changed. Now, he's a $3,800 subdivision chief and a real human being."

Ellender said, "I think that's a splendid thing."

Short and other personnel men described their current training programs for supervisors, through forums and discussions.

"We have to train the supervisors to know that he has a human relations job," said Short. In most cases of employe grievances, he said, "the fault is with the supervisor, who just doesn't know. He hasn't been shown he has an administrative job."

Short advised another formula. He said main sources of employe complaints arise over job classification, and failure to have money for pay increases within grades.

Urges Broad Formula

"Can anything be done?" Ellender asked. "There should be a Government-wide formula to earmark funds for regular salary increases within grades."

A scattered poll of the personnel men left unsettled the question whether employe grievances have increased since their programs started. A. J. Sarre, of the Federal Works Agency, said he wouldn't be satisfied "if I had a department where I didn't get grievances.

"If you get a situation where you don't hear from your employes, you'd better look into it," he said. "That's something you've got to expect."

Stephen P. Ryder, of the Civil Service Commission, suggested that complaints probably had increased as soon as ways were opened for them to be heard. After the machinery was set up, he said, they tended to decline. Short said that "contacts" with employes increased, but the personnel men were there to see that complaints were satisfied before they developed into major issues.

Tentative Plan Framed

Ellender questioned the personnel directors on methods for setting up a uniform procedure in the Government for handling employe relations. E. R. Ballinger, of the Treasury; Edward Yardley, of the State Department, and Ryder had drafted a report of current work of the commission and the Council of Personnel Administration in framing a uniform program for the major agencies.

Ryder said that after three months of conferences with Government officials and employe groups, the commission had drafted a statement of principles of good personnel policy, and referred it to the council.

Irish Envoy Speaks

How the independent Irish state grew from a meeting of seven men in Dublin 47 years ago to form an organization to revive the Gaelic language was described last night by Robert Brennan, Minister of Eire, before the Irish Cultural Society of Catholic University. He spoke on "The Men of Easter Week: Their Contribution to the Irish Nation."

The meeting was held in the University Music Building. The Right Rev. David T. O'Dwyer, head of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, was honorary chairman.

Tarzan, 12, Gets Hurt

A 12-year-old Tarzan in Rock Creek Park yesterday grasped a vine, emitted a lusty call of the wild, swung from a treetop and landed in Georgetown Hospital.

Eugene Morgan, erstwhile Tarzan, suffered lacerations of the left foot when the vine parted and his leg was snared by the crotch of a limb. Eugene, who lives at 3205 Porter street northwest, was not seriously hurt.

Green Peas Spilled

A six-ton load of green peas, fresh from South Carolina, tipped over on Fourteenth street southwest, last night when the driver, Louis Johnson, 25, attempted a turn at D street.

In the middle of the turn Johnson's truck sideswiped an automobile driven by William B. Cleveland, 42, of Alexandria, and then fell on another car, driven by Abraham C. Seldon, 49, of Jacksonville, Fla. No one was hurt.

500 Firemen, Police to Attend Mass in Body

Society Will March To St. Patrick's For Mother's Day Rite

More than 500 members of the Catholic Police and Firemen's Society will commemorate Mother's Day tomorrow by attending the 8 o'clock mass at St. Patrick's Church, Tenth and G streets northwest.

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington and Baltimore, will be celebrant and deliver the sermon at the mass, which will be preceded by a parade from the Knights of Columbus Hall on Tenth street, led by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band. The recently formed police drill team will march.

The Rev. Thomas M. Dade, assistant at St. Patrick's and spiritual adviser of the society, will assist in the services.

A breakfast at the Willard Hotel will follow, with District Attorney Edward M. Curran as main speaker. Talks also will be made by the Rev. Hirl Kester, pastor of Congress Street Methodist Church; Representative Edward J. Hart (Democrat), of New Jersey, and Lewis B. Nichols, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Maj. Ernest W. Brown will be among the guests.

The Postoffice branch of the Holy Name Society will hold its first annual communion mass, honoring Mother's Day tomorrow at 9 a. m. at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Eighth and N streets northwest.

Dr. John K. Cartwright, rector, will be celebrant, and Dr. John Tracy Ellis, of Catholic University, will preach. The Rev. Michael M. Hyle, spiritual director of the Holy Name branch, and George F. Harbin, president of the Washington section of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies, will speak at a breakfast afterward in Pilgrims' Hall on the Franciscan Monastery grounds, Brookland.

Church Greets Dr. Harrison At Reunion

Dr. H. W. Burgan Tells Of General Conference Spirit of Unity

Dr. W. E. Harrison, pastor of the Iowa Avenue Methodist Church here during the first World War days, and now a Michigan religious leader, got the glad hand last night at the Men's Brotherhood Bible Class annual dinner at Hamline Methodist Church. Iowa Avenue and Hamline merged years ago.

Superintendent of the Ann Arbor District of the Detroit Conference, Methodist Church, and delegate to the recent Methodist General Conference at Atlantic City, he stressed the importance of the personality developing processes of religion.

Bringing echoes of that conference, Dr. H. W. Burgan, Hamline pastor and also delegate, described the encouraging spirit of unity at the parley, and said he hoped it might lead someday to a more significant unity—that of entire Protestantism.

Frank L. Smith, class president, welcomed the guests; Dr. Chesteen Smith, a former Hamline pastor, gave the invocation, and Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District of the Methodist Church, Baltimore Conference, and others, spoke briefly.

Trail Club to Hike

The Potomac Appalachian Trail Club will hike on the Appalachian trail from Linden to Paris, Va., tomorrow. H. L. Solyom, 5555 River road, will be the leader. The bus will leave Pennsylvania avenue and Eighteenth street northwest.

Symphony Drive Finds More Donors

Contributors Total 1,124, an Increase Of 724 Over Same Period Last Year

Early returns in the National Symphony Orchestra's drive for $107,600 show a large increase over last year in the number of individual contributions, A. F. E. Horn, campaign chairman, announced yesterday.

The $43,626.28 already collected represents 1,124 donors, Horn reported. In the corresponding period of last year's drive, only 400 contributors had been enlisted. The increase of 724 was believed by Horn to indicate a greater interest in the symphony's future.

At the same time the total amount of the pledges has not increased correspondingly. In fact, Horn said, at the first report luncheon in 1939 a total of $51,435.65 was reported.

The special gifts committee's report this year showed a gain of 29 pledges, with a total of $14,385.50 less than that of last year's. The business and professional committee has gained 50 pledges and $1,593.50 over last year; the Army has gained 174 pledges and $57.78; the associations committee has gained 59 pledges and $1,345; the education committee has gained 38 pledges and $966.50; the Government has gained 87 pledges, but shows a loss of $724 in the total amount raised; the Navy's report shows a loss of 7 pledges and $677, which does not take into account $700 worth of pledges turned in too late yesterday to be included in the report; the Orchestra Guild gained 279 pledges and $3,695, and the suburban committee has gained 25 pledges and $319.45.

"The greatest loss, as the figures show, is in the special gifts division, and this is actually not a loss at all," Horn said. "I don't doubt that the special gifts committee will reach its quota, but you must remember the members of this group have had only a few days in which to solicit the larger contributors, which is their special province, while last year they had been working for several weeks before the opening of the campaign."

Roosevelt High Concert Draws Audience of 500

Nearly 500 persons last night attended the spring concert of the music department of Roosevelt High School held in the school auditorium. The band, orchestra and boys' and girls' glee clubs were featured.

Violet Boldogh played Kreisler's adaptation of Mozart's "Rondo" for violin. Beethoven's piano concerto No. 3 was played by Frieda Bass and Shirley Levin. A cornet trio included Ben Fisher, Robert Carey and Donald Gross. Rumsey Beery and Eugene Fry sang "Sylvia."

Selections by the school's full band were Sousa's "High School Cadets," Holmes' "Safari" and Yoder's "Circus Parade." The orchestra played Strauss' "Tales From the Vienna Woods" and selections from Haydn's symphony No. 32.

Boys Escape Injury Under Half Ton of Steel

Two boys escaped serious injury yesterday when they were trapped under almost 1,000 pounds of steel webbing used to reenforce concrete.

While playing in a construction company yard at Eighth and Lawrence streets northeast, Fred H. Kruelle, 10, of 3115 Seventh street northeast, and Billy Hand, 8, of 709 Jackson street northeast, were struck by the pile of steel when it shifted. They were extracted by workmen and firemen and taken to Casualty Hospital. Both youngsters appeared none the worse for wear after receiving first aid to cuts and bruises

8,000 Safety Patrol Members Hold Practice Prelude to Parade Down Constitution Today

Early Arrivals See Show at Mall; 16,000 Expected to March

Eight thousand strong, school safety patrol members from Washington, its suburbs, and nearby States converged on the Sylvan Theater last night for a lighthearted prelude to the parade of juvenile custodians from over the Nation to be held this morning.

The ninth annual parade, in which 16,000 boys and girls are expected to march, will move west on Constitution avenue, starting at Fourth street northwest at 9:30 a. m., past a reviewing stand at Sixteenth street. It is sponsored by the District public schools, the police departments, and the American Automobile Association.

Overflowing the seats provided for them on the slope below the Washington Monument, the youngsters from Washington and early arrivals from a half-dozen States, last night gave an enthusiastic reception to half a dozen law enforcement and A. A. A. officials who made brief addresses of welcome.

Different From 40 Foreign Youths

"You stand for law and order and parade for safety, while the youth of other countries parade for destruction," Inspector Louis B. Nichols, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told the young safety officers.

Earlier Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, promised the "most spectacular parade in the history of the city" to the youngsters Russell E. Singer, national manager of the A. A. A. had addressed as "mobilized for safety."

Equally enthusiastic were the boys and girls about a program of entertainment featured by dancing and musical acts, balancing entertainments, and a demonstration of Indian lore that followed.

Drill to Precede Parade

Echoes of the demonstration below the illuminated Monument could be heard as far away as Pennsylvania avenue, down which columns of the youngsters had filed earlier, paying meticulous attention to walk lights and traffic signals.

Before the start of today's parade safety patrol units will compete in a drill at 8:15 a. m. in the Mall at Sixth street northwest. Former patrol members will then give demonstrations of driving skill on the roadway to the rear of the reviewing stand.

The parade, in which marching units will be interspersed by floats illustrating safety principles, and high school bands, and led by the Navy Band, will be followed by presentation of awards at the reviewing stand.

These will go to winning drill teams, floats, bands and slogan contest winners. A luncheon at the Willard will follow in which educators, police, and motor club officials will discuss various phases of patrol operatin.

Two D. C. Men To Be Ordained At Baltimore

Two Washington men are among twelve seminarians who will be ordained to the priesthood by Archbishop Curley in Baltimore Tuesday.

The Washingtonians are George Gingras, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Gingras, of 316 North Carolina avenue southeast, and Aloysius Edward O'Connor, son of Mrs. Anna M. O'Connor and the late Daniel O'Connor, of 121 Gallatin street northwest.

Gingras was educated here at St. Peter's School, Gonzaga High School, and Georgetown University, and St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore. O'Connor attended St. Martin's School and Sulpician Seminary here, St. Charles College, Catonsville, Md., and St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore.

Other seminarians to be ordained include Henry E. Hammond and Richard M. Rivard, both of the Richmond diocese; Charles J. McGinley and William E. Jennings, of Wilmington (Del.) diocese, and John P. McManus, of the diocese of Cleveland.

Deadlock Threatens McGehee Bill

Issue of Benefit Base Period Balks Consideration On District Day

Hope for a reduction of the District pay roll tax and the liberalization of unemployment benefits dwindled yesterday as the House District Committee failed to reach an agreement on differences between business and labor interests.

As a consequence the bill could not be put on the House calendar for what probably will be the last District day, next Monday.

Nine committee members agreed tentatively on all issues save one, and that was a demand by labor representatives that a limitation to one-third of earnings in a base period be eliminated from the McGehee bill.

Fail to Get Quorum

When labor members voted, 5 to 4, to strike out this limitation, Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, raised a point of no quorum and the meeting adjourned. It was the second attempt to get a quorum at a special session this week.

Members who voted to remove the limitation were Representatives Eberharter, of Pennsylvania; D'Alesandro, of Maryland, and Kennedy, of New York, all Democrats, and Bolles, of Wisconsin, a Republican.

Lined up with McGehee were Representatives Dirksen, of Illinois; Bates, of Massachusetts, and Goodwin, of Iowa, all Republicans.

McGehee expressed the belief that the legislation is dead for the session and stated that he had yielded as far as he could to labor demands. Eberharter still clung to a faint hope that an agreement may be reached and that the legislation may be enacted before adjournment.

Issues upon which tentative agreement was said to have been obtained before the deadlock on benefit limitation were:

Maximum weekly benefit payments of $16 a week for 18 weeks and a minimum of $6 a week.

Advisory Council Rejected

Retention of the Unemployment Compensation Board at five members and rejection of a proposal to set up an advisory council.

Allowance for dependents of $2 for wife and $1 for each child up to the $16 maximum and allowance for dependent crippled children above 16 years of age.

The 2.7 per cent tax, with salaries above $3,000 exempted, and a requirement that earnings must have been $125 for the base period to qualify for benefits.

A two-week waiting period and no allowances for unemployed persons on a strike or lockout.

Provisions for benefit payments during partial unemployment.

The paragraph of the McGehee bill upon which the committee split provides that maximum benefit payments shall be figured on the basis of 18 times the weekly benefit amount proportional to wages "or one-third of the wages earned by him in his base period, whichever is the lesser."

Aproned Dads Serve Concordia Church Dinner As Mothers and Daughters Take It Easy

MRS. R. W. SANTELMANN CAROL SANTELMANN RHODA MILLIKEN

Capt. Milliken was guest speaker at last night's second annual mother-daughter banquet at the Concordia Evangelical Lutheran Church

Looking forward to Mother's Day tomorrow, women of Concordia Evangelical Lutheran Church last night sat back and took things easy, as aproned dads served the annual mother-daughter dinner.

While fathers wiped the dishes, the diners heard Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau here, urge the churches' continued support in improving social conditions in the city.

Earlier, Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, wife of the superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, sang several mother-accented numbers; Mrs. Rudolph W. Santelmann brought a message on behalf of the mothers, and Miss Marie Strobel for the daughters.

Mrs. Harry Meiners was toastmistress for the function, sponsored by the Concordians of the congregation.

Meanwhile, members of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society of the District, holding their monthly meeting at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, paid tribute to their mothers, special guests. Miss Vincento Spano, president, led the exercises. The Ninth Street Christian Church junior choir, directed by the Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor, sang.

Church of the Week

The Rev. and Mrs. J. Ray Garrett, with their two sons, Chan, 5, and Duane, 2

By Robert Tate Allan

Historic Second Baptist Church, second oldest of its denomination here, will mark its 130th birthday June 3 with gala ceremonies.

The Rev. J. Ray Garrett, new pastor, and his family will be tendered a congregational reception at that time, and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, and the Rev. Charles B. Austin, president, will speak. Special music and other features have been arranged.

The new clergyman, formerly of Cocoa, Fla., and who assumed charge here May 5, will discuss the anniversary's significance Sunday, June 2, as the congregation meets for regular services.

Mr. Garrett, who resides at 3608 Twenty-sixth street northeast with his wife and sons, Chan and Duane, once served the pulpit of the First Baptist Church of Invernes, Fla. He is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene, Tex., and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

800 in Church School

Worshiping at Seventeenth and East Capitol streets southeast, opposite the Eastern High School, and near the new John Philip Sousa Bridge at Pennsylvania avenue, the Second Baptist Church congregation is looking forward to construction of the last unit of its planned $100,000 church and educational building.

That will be a church auditorium above the present first unit of the structure, erection of which began in August, 1934. The two lower floors were completed in March, 1935, first occupied on March 31, and formally dedicated on April 4.

The congregation is hoping additional space soon will be provided for the growing church school, now boasting a membership of 800, and with an average attendance of almost 500. The church enrollment is 800.

Mounting interest in the church school has been attributed largely to splendid leadership of such workers as Edward N. Janson, superintendent; H. C. Short, assistant; Charles E. Henderson, treasurer; John R. Hoffman, secretary; Wallace Tabor, assistant, and Mrs. H. C. Short, pianist.

Among the other organization leaders are Mrs. Geneva White, president of the Aid Society; Mrs. Roberta Blount, the United Missionary Societies; Mrs. Anna Jones, counselor of Young People's Missionary groups; Thurman Terry Beach, director of youth activities, and Miss Frances Rock, Miss Dorothy Hoffman and Miss Esther Sangster, presidents of the Baptist Young People's units.

Organized in 1810

Other officials are Charles A. H. Bailey, W. B. Reeves, Pryor E. Heffner, Thomas D. Stuart, F. W. B. Sangster, J. D. Nolph, H. C. Short, W. N. Janson, Edward N. Janson, Charles E. Henderson and Dr. Charles C. Read, deacons, and Mr. Stuart, Julian Juaire, S. H. Beck, T. R. Winchester, A. R. Gragg, W. H. Smith, Wallace Tabor and Mr. Nolph, trustees.

Mr. Stuart is church treasurer; William N. Janson, clerk; Charles E. Warfield, building fund treasurer; Mr. Nolph, financial secretary, and Mr. Juaire, finance committee chairman. Herbert A. Hudson is choir director; Mrs. C. H. Sorrell, organist, and John R. Hoffman, choir president.

Organized in 1810, and often known as the "grandmother" of Southeast churches, Second Baptist Church was for many years situated at Fourth and Virginia avenue southeast. Then it was called the Second Baptist Church at the Navy Yard.

Many of its pastors and lay leaders, many of whom have passed on, were outstanding in the local religious field. Dr. H. M. B. Jones died last December after a ten-year fruitful pastorate there. Long before him the late Dr. E. H. Swem served for 26 years.

Two living former pastors are the Rev. E. C. Primm, now of Trenton, N. J., and the Rev. Henson V. Howlett, both of whom are expected to attend the anniversary fete.

The Janson Bible Class, one of the most active groups of its kind here, was named after the late Lars Janson, who died in 1935, after lengthy and loyal service as church deacon and teacher. His sons are William N. Janson, chairman of the Building Fund Campaign Committee, deacon, former church clerk, and once Janson class teacher, and now secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention, and Edward N. Janson.

Son Will Occupy His Father's Pulpit At National City

Raphael H. Miller, jr., who on May 20 will be graduated from Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will preach from his father's pulpit at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle.

PASTOR'S SON

The son, who will receive his Bachelor of Divinity degree, has been a student at Colgate-Rochester since acquiring his Bachelor of Arts degree from American University here in 1937.

Born in Unionville, Ohio, in 1917, he was president of the second-year class at the Divinity School, and vice president of the student body.

Columbia Heights—Mother's Day will be celebrated tomorrow, the Rev. A. P. Wilson preaching upon "Stewardship of Life." The mother-daughter banquet will be held on Wednesday evening.

Ninth Street—Mother's Day will be observed tomorrow, the Rev. Clifford H. Jope preaching on "Does Mother Expect Wages?"

Third—The Rev. C. N. Williams will speak tomorrow on "Is Christianity a Souvenir?"

Fifteenth Street. A pageant, directed by Mrs. Harold Snyder and a sermon on "Our Mothers" from the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, will feature Mother's Day tomorrow.

Park View. "The Mother of a Great Man" will be the Rev. J. Lloyd Black's sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Dr. McCartney To Be Named For Moderator

Covenant-First Pastor Lost Out Last Year To Dr. Higginbottom

Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, again will be nominated for the office of Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, it was learned here yesterday.

The clergyman, who was nominated last year but lost out to Dr. Sam Higginbottom, present moderator, will be among six men expected to be nominated at the one hundred and fifty-second assembly, convening this week in Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. McCartney's Mother's Day sermon theme will be "How An Outcast Mother Found God."

Westminster. Rev. Harry V. Porter will conduct the morning worship service and preach on the subject of "A Christlike Attitude Toward Life."

River Road. Special Mother's Day programs will feature all the services. The Rev. Virgil M. Cosby will preach on "Mother's Teaching," at the 11 o'clock service. The Youth Fellowship group will hold a tea in honor of mothers of the members at 6:30.

Metropolitan. "Mother's Day" will be observed tomorrow at 11:00 a. m. Dr. Fendrich will deliver the message to mothers on the theme, "Our Other Mothers."

At the 6 o'clock Vesper Service, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered, and a class of new members will be received.

Central. Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor, has been appointed a commissioner to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, commonly called the Southern Presbyterian Church, to represent the Presbytery of Potomac. Among several matters of importance coming before the assembly which convenes in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Thursday will be the proposal to continue the committee of conference with the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., commonly called the Northern Presbyterian Church, in regard to the union of the two bodies.

Gunton-Temple. Dr. Bernard Braskamp will use as the subject of his Mother's Day sermon: "Keepers of the Heart and of the Home." A tea for mothers and daughters of the church will be held in the chapel from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Chevy Chase. "An Old Institution in a Modern Day," will be the subject of Dr. J. Hillman Hollister's sermon at the 11 o'clock service.

Sherwood. The guest minister tomorrow will be The Rev. Ross M. Haverfield, of Monongahela, Pa.

New York Avenue. Members of the Robert Le Bruce Chapter of the De Molay Order will be guests at services tomorrow at 8 p. m., when the Rev. Peter Marshall will speak on "Youth and the Grail." His sermon theme at 11 a. m. will be "The Daughters of Zelophehad."

Cleveland Park Plans Dedication

The Cleveland Park Congregational Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. will hold a service of dedication for its renovated church auditorium, the first step in a comprehensive beautification program. The rostrum has been enlarged, floors refinished, pews installed and carpeting laid.

Participating in the service will be Mrs. D. E. Brown, superintendent, of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches; Dr. William Carl Reudiger, church president, and the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, pastor.

Ingram Memorial. "Pilgrim Mothers" will be the Rev. Frederick J. Bishop's sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Impressive Services Arranged To Pay Homage to Mothers

Many D. C. Churches to Give Tribute To Them, With Many Functions Next Week; Mount Vernon Place Plans Identical Rites

Mothers of the Nation, old-fashioned and modern, will have their inning tomorrow as Mother's Day is celebrated.

As in other years, churches of the Nation's Capital have arranged impressive services for the occasion. Mother-daughter dinners and other functions will be held during the week.

Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will have identical services tomorrow, with Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, preaching at 9:15 and 11 a. m. on "The Christian Home."

New members will be received on both occasions, with baptism at the latter service. The male quartet will sing "Mother's Prayer" as offertory. The 70-voiced choir will sing Van Dyke's "Mother."

Nursery to Be Dedicated

At 8 p. m. Deane Shure, organist-music director, will conduct a program entitled "A Portrayal of American Mothers," depicting pilgrim, pioneer, old-fashioned, Indian and modern mothers. They will be costumed. Jessma Oalin will be narrator and Dr. Rustin, reader.

American War Mothers will attend services at the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S street northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m., when Dr. Seth R. Brooks will preach on "A System of One Word."

The Washington Citty Church of the Brethren will mark the occasion by dedicating a well-equipped nursery, with a graduate nurse in charge. Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor, will speak at 9 and 11 a. m. on "Dedicated to the Lord." Several babies will be consecrated at the latter service.

The senior B. Y. P. D. will have a special "Mother's Day" program at 6:50 p. m., with mothers as special guests. The Brethren mother-daughter dinner will be held on Tuesday at 6:30 p. m., at Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse streets northwest.

Takoma Lutherans to Baptize

Foundry Methodist Church's "Mother's Day" services will be held in a setting resembling an old-fashioned garden, with cut flowers and potted plants presented by members and friends in honor of their mothers. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris will preach at 11 a. m. on "At the Altar of Motherhood," when babies will be baptized. "Faith of Our Mothers" has been chosen as his theme for 8 p. m.

Leading his Takoma Luthern congregation in a Pentecostal and Mother's Day service, the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer will administer baptism, confirmation and greet a group of new members tomorrow at 11 a. m. His sermon will be "The Spiritual Mother—the Christian Church." The mother's theme also will dominate the children's church service at 10 a. m.

Mothers will serve as ushers at Metropolitan Baptist services tomorrow, where Dr. John Compton Ball, pastor, will preach on "Mothers and Motherhood, Human and Divine." Three youths will present tributes to mothers. Spanish War veterans will stage their annual "Mother's Day" commemoration at 7:45 p. m., when the Rev. Robert C. Savage, assistant pastor, will peak on "My Mother's Bible."

Twenty-two memorial and gift windows will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. as a high spot of the services at Eldbrooke Methodist Church, where Dr. Walter M. Michael will discuss "Mothers as Windows of Heaven." New members will be welcomed. The Rev. J. Luther Neff, Wesley Methodist pastor, will preach at 8 p. m. on "Deserving Motherhood."

Dr. Abernethy to Preach

The annual welcome and dedication service for parents and babies of the cradel roll department and their mothers will be held at Calvary Baptist Church at 11 a. m. Dr. William S. Abernethy's sermon topic for children will be "Interesting People." His regular theme will be "The Christian Home."

Mother's Day services tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the Army Medical Center will have as speakers Mrs. Robert E. Ridenhour, of Concord, N. C., national president of the American War Mothers, and Mrs. Florance A. Latham, of Kansas City, Mo., national secretary. There will be a presentation of a church flag by Mrs. Shelley V. Marietta on behalf of the Capel Guild of the Army Medical Center.

The Mother's Day Peace Committee of the District tomorrow will sponsor a round-table discussion on "Keep America Out of War," with Representative Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York, and three mothers speaking over WOL at 5:15 p. m. The organization's program for peace will be presented from several pulpits.

Congregational Editor to Speak

Dr. Albert Peel, prominent English Congregationalist, editor of the Congregationalist Quarterly, will speak tomorrow at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church on "Britain and France in Time of War." Sixty students from Eastern High School will sing.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson will preach at 11 a. m. on "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

Mount Pleasant. Dr. Peel will share the pulpit with Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

"I NEED THEE EVERY HOUR"
. . . MRS. ANNIE S. HAWKS . . .

I need Thee ev'ry hour,
Most gracious Lord;
No tender voice like Thine
Can peace afford.
I need Thee, O I need Thee;
Ev'ry hour I need Thee!
O bless me now, my Saviour,
I come to Thee!

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn of pleading was written by Mrs. Annie Sherwood Hawks in 1855. She sent it to Dr. Lowry, who composed the melodic tune and added the very effective chorus. It was first sung at a Sunday School convention in 1872, and ever since has enriched the song service of many a congregation.

Germans Came Over at 4 A.M...

1. THE AMAZING METHODS OF AERIAL WARFARE enabled the Germans to circuvent the entire Netherlands' water and land defense system and move into Rotterdam, scarcely more than 100 miles fr om the British coast and the home of 600,000 people, at 4 a. m. (10:40 p. m., Eastern standard time). Above is the Rotterdam battleground—Dutch troops were resisting from main part of the city (1) after Germans had parachuted from planes to land in the Mieuwe Maas River (shown center), occupied bridge (2), and attempted to attack from left bank of the Maas (3)

2. THE WAALHAVEN AIRPORT, south of Rotterdam, was converted into a series of craters by air bombs and the hangars knocked to the ground. Although antiaircraft batteries kept up a constant barrage, the Germans succeeded in landing their men by parachute and overwhelming the Dutch defenders

3. IN AMSTERDAM, only an-hour-and-a-half motor trip northeast of Rotterdam the stock exchange was closed and Dutch Nazi and Communist newspapers were shut down by government order. Many German planes flew over Amsterdam, but there were no bombs to drive the population to the shelters, all built above, rather than below, the water-soaked ground. Defense guns ringing the city were in action from 3:30 a. m. to after 7 a. m., but German planes were over the country as early as 2 a. m.. Above scene shows one of the city's placid canals

4. SCHIPHOL AIRPORT, about 5 miles south of Amsterdam, was bombed heavily at dawn, but Amsterdam, capital and largest city of the Netherlands, with a population of nearly 800,000, was not attacked. Fifteen persons were wounded, five seriously, at Schiphol and houses about the airport were wrecked. Antiaircraft fire and fighter planes met the attackers and shell bursts were clearly visible from buildings in Amsterdam. The above photo, made yesterday, was telephoned to London, radioed to New York and wired to Washington, exclusively by the Associated Press. Huge columns of smoke rise from one of the buildings at the airport

5. GERMANY'S PLANE AND PARACHUTE TROOPS, attempting to fight their way through Rotterdam, were driven back into a dangerous position by the attacks of reinforced Dutch troops and the pounding of Dutch artillery. The Dutch claimed that in some instances the Nazi parachute troops wore Holland army uniforms

6. DETACHMENTS OF NETHERLANDS MARINES made repeated rushes into the enemy positions on the River Nieuwe Mass at Rotterdam late yesterday and the fighting was reported fierce. Netherlands Marines are shown in the lower photo with full-battle equipment. At top is a Dutch artillery unit in action

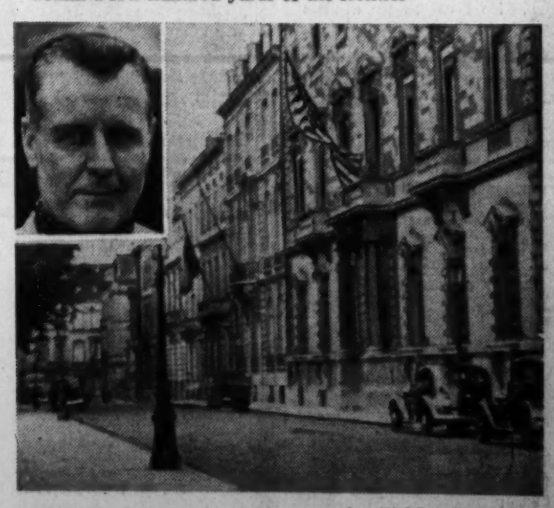
7. WHERE FLOOD WATERS were sent raging into strategic regions in the Netherlands, Germans used flat-bottomed boats to span the inundated areas. German sea planes that landed on the River Nieuwe Maas at Rotterdam put troops ashore in rubber boats

8. LUXEMBOURG was in the path of the invading Nazi troops. Grand Duchess Charlotte and Prince Felix, of the Royal Family of Luxembourg, were reported to have found refuge in northern France with their six children. Left to right —Marie Gabrielle, 14; Marie Adelaide, 16; the Grand Duchess; Elizabeth, 17; Alix, 9; Prince John, 18; Prince Felix and Prince Charles, 12

9. THE HAGUE'S PALACE OF PEACE—At noon yesterday the German radio announced that Nazi troops had occupied The Hague, seat of the Netherlands government. Two hours later a dispatch from The Hague said that German leaflets dropped by plane told the residents that strong German forces have surrounded the city and that resistance is insanity

10. QUEEN WILHELMINA of the Netherlands shown with King Leopold of the Belgians, made a "flaming protest" against Germany, spurring Holland to hurl its entire strength against the incroaching German spearheads. King Leopold has assumed command of Belgium's forces, as his father, Albert, did in 1914

11. BELGIUM met the German invasion by full mobilization. The foreign ministry announced yesterday that German land forces had been stopped within a few hundred yards of the frontier



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

12. THE AMERICAN EMBASSY in Brussels, shown with the American flag flying, was damaged by a German bomb. Ambassador John Cudahy (inset) reported that he had been partly deafened and almost knocked down by the force of a bomb which exploded 300 feet from the building. The windows were shattered by the blast

Anderson's Prize Play Becomes an A-1 Celluloid

"Saturday's Children," at the Earle, Costars John Garfield, Anne Shirley; A Hoarse "Red" Skelton Tops Stage Revue

"SATURDAY'S CHILDREN." Warner Brothers picturization of Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer Prize play, adapted to the screen by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, costarring John Garfield and Anne Shirley, with Claude Rains, Lee Patrick, Roscoe Karns, Geirge Tobias, Dennie Moore, Elizabeth Risdon and Berton Churchill. Directed by Vincent Sherman. Previewed Wednesday, May 8. At the Earle Theater.

BASED ON that portion of a familiar rhyme that says children born on Saturday will experience a hard struggle with life and "have a long way to go," Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer Prize play, "Saturday's Children," has been made into a homely, humorous and happily inspiring screen comedy-drama by the Warner Brothers, with direction by Vincent Sherman. Presented yesterday for the first time on a Washington screen at the Earle Theater, it revealed a quality of honesty and naturalness that places it among the best of the many "family" pictures that have found their way to the silver sheet.

BELL

The story deals with an aspect of New York life that is slightly sub-middle class, in which the battle to make both ends meet is a gruelling one. Mr. Halevy, an underbookkeeper, manages to get his daughter a minor job with the same firm, where she meets a dreamy young inventor who aspires to renown beyond that possible in a job that is not quite white-collar. They are married. Economic catastrophe is not long in overtaking them—what with the war, declining business graphs and one thing and another. When sheer desperation faces them, Paterfamilias Halevy thinks he has discovered a way out. It is a daring and heroic way, that serves to open the eyes of his son-in-law to the real meaning of life and the fight for survival. His plans for a career in the Philippines, making silk out of hemp, are kicked into a cocked hat, but "what the heck, we are young and if we don't get to Manila this year, maybe we can next. We'll find something."

The roles of the young lovers are especially well played by John Garfield, who unveils a sense of humor for the first time on the screen, and Anne Shirley, who has improved tremendously as an ingenuous young actress, in the role of the girl who won her husband by a ruse, dreamed up out of her own past experience by an older sister. Claude Rains, to all intents and purposes, is perfect as the father and Elizabeth Risdon no less effective as the patient and understanding mother. Lee Patrick, as the scheming elder sister, and Dennie Moore, one of "Bobby" Halevy's officemates, contribute in telling fashion to the comedy, the while Roscoe Karns is "pressing" a little too violently for his. George Tobias and Berton Churchill complete the cast.

Returning to the Earle stage with as fine a case of laryngitis as you could hope to find, "Red" Skelton heads Harry Anger's "Merry Mad Mob" revue, as master of ceremonies and chief comedian, and bats 1,000 in both capacities. As far as I could remember at yesterday's first performance, "Red's" individual stints—and they are many—all are new. At any rate they are all funny—thanks in part to able assistance from Edna Stillwell.

Among the specialists introduced by the incorrigible Skelton are Jay and Lou Seiler, with their semi-circular skis and an evident willingness to break their necks; the Christianis, five men and a girl in a round of whirlwind acrobatics, and Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey in their unfailingly effective pianoing and singing. Their "Lullaby in Blue," an original adaptation of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," is something to hear. So is everything else they do.

The Roxyettes participate in virtually every number and pitch in a few ne plus ultra routines of their own. The Paramount News is the only supplementary of a thoroughly engaging bill.

'Hurry Up! You'll Miss the Bus!'

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 10.

NOEL COWARD joined Jack Pearl's table at the Stork Club, and asked him to identify the tunes which Ernie Holst's orchestra was playing. "I've been away, y'know," said Coward, "and these tunes aren't quite familiar to me yet . . . Pearl identified every song as being one of the tunes from "Too Many Girls." Noel accepted this—until the orchestra played a medley of Coward tunes . . . all of which Pearl identified as "songs from 'Too Many Girls' " . . . "My dear Jack," said Coward, as he left, "if they play the Star Spangled Banner—remember—it's not from 'Too Many Girls.' "

THIS WEEK Stanton Griffis, of Paramount, made a speech in which he deplored the Government's attack upon Hollywood, and said: "This is an industry that resolutely endeavors to keep out of the field of politics and propaganda, although I sincerely believe that if the motion picture companies should so desire, within a very short time they could so influence public opinion as to elect a Congress and a President." A Federal official left for Washington Wednesday, to set off the Congressional boomerang against Paramount, for this statement . . . Moe Annenberg made Herbert Mayard Swope a generous offer to become asociated with him in all his publishing ventures. When Swope's conditions weren't accepted, he declined.

BEFORE THEIR JOINT recital in Hollywood, Benny Goodman held a final conference with Leopold Stokowski. During their conversation, Goodman became careless—and addressed Stokowski as "Toscanini" . . . The startled conductor drew back—painfully shocked . . . "Oh, I'm sorry," Goodman apologized. "I'm very sorry, Mr. Stokowski. Just for that—you call me Artie Shaw."

MARGIE HART, the strip-teaser, learned about the publicized, revealed costume Zorina will wear in "Louisiana Purchase"—and is having it copied, to wear at her Gayety Theater opening.

WILLIAM ANTHONY McGUIRE, who is not a member of the Screen Writers Guild, had that organization arbitrate the screen-credits he sought for "The Life of Lillian Russell"—and was awarded a full victory . . . Louis Kronenberger is telling of the time when Queen Marie visited America, and asked to meet Dr. Adolf Meyer, the psychiatrist at John Hopkins. "Dr. Meyer," an intermediary introduced, "I want you to meet the Queen of Rumania." The psychiatrist's professional reply was: "How long does she think she's been Queen?"

LEO C. ROSTON, who writes the Leonard Q. Ross stories for the New Yorker, has started the writing of his two-year study of the motion picture industry, made under auspices of Carnegie and Rockefeller funds. Harcourt Brace will publish his three-volume report. The first will be called the Motion Picture Colony; the second, the Motion Picture Industry; the third The Motion Pictures. He'll spend 18 months on this writing job . . . Weber & Fields will entertain at the Booksellers Convention on Sunday—in connection with Parker Morell's book about their onetime-employe, Lillian Russell . . . Douglas Fairbanks, jr., will portray O. Henry in "The Life of O Henry."

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN lunched with Romney Brent at a restaurant which specializes in seafood . . . The waiter asked Brent for his order—and was told: "I'll have some Porgy" . . . "And you, Mr. Kaufman," the playwright was asked . . . "What kind of fish did Mr. Brent order?" Kaufman inquired . . . "Porgy, sir, porgy," the waiter informed . . . "Then I," said Kaufman, "must have bass."

JOHN GARFIELD, who is expected back in Hollywood to play "The Patent Leather Kid," instead is growing a moustache—which the Patent Leather Kid never had. Garfield loves the theater, and will remain in New York for 2 years . . . When the Park Central management asked the 500 customers to leave the Cocoanut Grove Wednesday night, because of a feared gas-explosion, not one check was submitted to the departing guests.

IN DISCUSSING what's wrong with the movies, Sam Goldwyn is the first producer with sufficient courage to put most of the blame on the producers. "Six hundred pictures were made last year," he said, "yet there aren't enough brains in the town to produce more than 200 good ones." Goldwyn is advocating fewer and better films, with increased admission prices for the outstanding ones. He'll try that with his newest—"The Westerner."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, May 10.

Helen Broderick, who starred on Broadway in "As Thousands Cheer," is having a new play written for her by Moss Hart and George Kaufman. Helen's a riot in "Old Lady 31." She calls action pictures "jungler buzzards." A friend came up to her on the set and said, "sorry to hear your son Broderick was hurt yesterday." "What do you mean—hurt? He got a scratch on his chest—his own fault. From reports, you'd think he'd had his heart cut out." Then went on to say, "I feel full of love and sunshine this morning. I was only 75 per cent viotriolic last night, and had a wonderful time. A famous star, which I don't like, did a beautiful flop in his new picture. So I called up all his enemies to cheer them with the good news."

HOPPER

She was all set with a swell gag. Was going to wear rompers, take a nurse and school teacher, and demand the director give her time out for her lessons and nap, because she thought she was the baby of the troupe. It was then that she discovered, to her horror, that Beulah Bondi was younger!

When I asked her what she had done with her dog, she said, "Oh, I chained him to my husband before I left home—he'll be all right."

Howard Hughes is not rushing into production. He's waiting until Venus or a new star walks into his office—then watch him go. He can take plenty of time, the money's in the bank waiting for him. Incidentally, Howard is one of the kindest men in town. His gardener was taken ill recently. Howard paid expenses, and will till he's well. His employes say when you work for Howard Hughes, it's a life job.

Greta Garbo had special portraits taken before taking out her American citizenship papers. Which reminds me of a remark I heard the other day, which was to this effect, "I wonder who's made the best record—Dewey, who has gotten more votes for Roosevelt, or Hitler, who's made more citizens for America."

Myrna Loy has really been watching our ball games—'cause the other day on the set of "I Love You Again," she tossed a large plate of scrambled eggs—a la Keystone Comedy—practically all over Bill Powell—and in one take!

Gil Perkins, ace Hollywood stunt man, had his choice of two jobs the other day. One, a $50.00 banker bit part, other to double for Leon Errol when a ton of rubbish is accidentally dumped on him in a scene for "$1,000 Marriage" that paid Gil $100. He took it!

'One Million B. C.' Presents Romance of Prehistoric Tribes

"ONE MILLION B. C." Hal Roach picturisation of a screen play by Mickell Novak, George Baker and Joseph Frickert, featuring Victor Mature, Carole Landis and Lon Chaney, jr., with John Hubbard, Mamo Clark, Nigel de Brulier, Mary Gale Fisher, Edgar Edwards, Ines Palange and Jacqueline Dalya. Directed by Hal Roach and Hal Roach, jr. Commentary by Grover Jones, narrated by Conrad Nagel. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Those were the days! We mean back in "One Million, B. C." when you had personally to kill your dinner before you ate it. And if you went for a walk you were likely to become a dinosaur's dinner!

If they had spoken English, the favorite remark of the prehistoric folks in this thriller would have been "Everything happens to me." Monstrous reptiles and mastodons chase them into caves and up trees, they fall off cliffs, fight with each other and also have to contend with earthquakes and volcanic eruptions.

Two tribes, the Cave People and the Shell People, appear in "One Million, B. C.," this week's feature at the Metropolitan. Naturally there's a romance between a Cave boy and a Shell girl. The Shell folks who live on fish, clams and fruit, are much pleasanter than the meat-eating Cave People, whose table manners are worse than deplorable. It's their grabbing and gobbling ways that start the story going. Young Tumak's father, Akhoba, snatches a chunk of meat practically out of his offspring's jaws. On this, Tumak forgets himself so far as to smack his papa down. Ensues a terrible whaling for Tumak and his banishment from the tribe. So he goes down the river and takes up with the Shell People.

Animals "Steal" Picture

The animals and reptiles of "One Million, B. C." are tremendously engrossing. Once or twice it seemed as though artificial reptiles were used. But we think that tiny lizards of various types have been trick-photographed into monsters, for the most part. The little people are chased by a tank-size armadillo in another sequence. Plain elephants, dressed up in shaggy hides and monstrous tusks, make pretty good mastodons. You'll have fun figuring just what is what among the prehistoric animals.

All the acting of the picture grades up nicely, with Lon Chaney, jr., showing up especially well, as savage old Akhoba; Nigel de Brulier, as the lod Shell Cheftain; Victor Mature, as handsome young Tumak and Carole Landis as blonde Loana, the good genius of the prehistoric people.

There's a generous allowance of good shorts, including Charlie Chase in "South of the Boudoir," a Government housing novelty in Technicolor and the currently exciting news reel.

MARY HARRIS.

'Forty Little Mothers' Is Capitol Feature; Barron Band a Hit

"FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturisation of a story by Jean Guitton, adapted to the screen by Dorothy Yost and Ernest Pagano, starring Eddie Cantor, with Judith Anderson, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Ralph Morgan, Diana Lewis, Nydia Westman, Margaret Early, Martha O'Driscoll, Charlotte Munier, Louise Seidel and Baby Quintanilla. Song by Charles Tobias and Nat Simon. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Gone seem to be the days when Eddie Cantor bobbed up and down before the footlights, clapping his hands, rolling his eyes, chanting happily. In his new film at the Capitol, "Forty Little Mothers," the musical-comedy star becomes an "extra added" mother, content to do the worrying, allowing Baby Quintanilla and his "Forty Little Mothers" to toss off the laughs.

On the Capitol stage, Blue Barron and his orchestra exhibit far more originality in nicely arranged tunes from this radio band's evidently popular repertoire. With several clever folk, the Barron lads put on an entertaining hour.

That the very young as well as the very old are invariably surefire screen material is astutely noted in this new Cantor film. There are almost as many close-ups of gurgling Baby Quintanilla as of the star. "Little Curley Hair in a High Chair," the single song in the picture, is already a popular ditty, and during its singing the wee one does all that a good screen baby seems expected to do.

The story begins seriously. Cantor, a middle-aged professor out of work, comes upon a foundling whom he takes to his already-behind-in-the-rent room. Through stealing some milk, circumstances take him to a girls school, where he is welcome because of his lack of appeal to feminine eyes, but the baby is not. The girls determine to be rid of their colorless instructor, but when they find their bachelor-teacher has a baby hidden in his rooms, they gush delightedly over the two males, set to knitting baby clothes.

Now this remarkable school in which the faculty is the weirdest bunch of females of the twentieth century, and in which Cantor is hired as an authority on the classics in a two-minute interview, is quite as shocked as any more normal school. This middle section of the film is played as farce and is by far the happiest portion of the picture.

Trick Lighting for Band

The girls make believe they are in love with Eddie, giving rise to innuendoes which must have been smuggled past the Hays office. Some of Nydia Westman's remarks as a spinster lack both humor and taste. Judith Anderson proceeds in her headmistress role in baffled fashion and Bonita Granville is fairly humorous as ringleader of the girls. Baby Quintanilla is, as are all babies, "cute."

Beginning with Jerome Kern's "Who," the Blue Barron aggregation presents a satisfying alternation of sweet and swing music. They offer a welcomely daft "Gone With the Wind" and Johnny Woods' imitations for humor. They light the stage handsomely for a brilliant finale of "Dancing in the Dark" and several of the better tunes. Russ Carlisle's "When You Wish Upon a Star," Charlie Fischer, Ronnie Snyder, Tiny Wolfe, Tito, Billy Wells and the Four Fays are other highlights in the soothingly pleasant stage proceedings.

An interesting Technicolor short subject on the Federal Housing Administration was well received by yesterday's first house.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 10.—(INS) I call this a musical year for Alice Faye. She just finished singing in "Lillian Russel" and her picture, "Down Argentine Way," has her warbling at a high speed. Today, just to complete the cycle, "Tin Pan Allley," an original by Pamela Harris, was bought for Alice. This is really a history of those ditties that had their origin in the old Tin Pan Alley and what a lot of them there were—catchy, wonderful numbers. Combined with all this is a heart-interest yarn.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Since Alice seems to be pining for Tony and Tony for Alice, she ought to be able to act better than ever before. I am told that in "Lillian Russell" she drops all those little mannerisms with which we found fault and that she really gives an outstanding performance.

A cable was sent to Leslie Howard by his agent, Mike Levee, late today asking him if he can leave England at this time to play the male lead in "The Letter," Bette Davis' next picture. Leslie is doing some special work for the British government, during war time, and whether or not he can be spared is problematical. Mike advised him to buy the Somerset Maugham book in England and read the story, and really there's a great part for Leslie as well as Bette, and I can't think of anyone who would be better. Bette and Leslie were in "Petrified Forest" together, which by the way, was one of Warner's best money-makers.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: the Tyrone Powers are getting ready for a very, very happy event—a visit from old man stork himself; Was it by design or accident that Robert Preston walked into the Grace Hayes Lodge, by his lonesome, where Dorothy Lamour and a young man were dining? Preston joined them; Mrs. Jack Oakie, who has been very ill, is home from a visit to her family in the South; Helen Mack's new heart beat is Don Terry; George Jessel and his bride, Lois Andrews, have a real estate agent scouting for a house with a swimming pool. So it means they are headed in this direction.

Betty Field and Garson Kanin a brand new twosome. It used to be Margot Stevenson; Ann Harding sold her Beverly Hills mansion and has bought a ranch near San Diego where she and her husband, Werner Jenssen will make their home; Lola Lane has bought the Edgar Rice Burrough's home in Tarzana. Hope she will ask the town to put the sign back on Reseda boulevard. We did and so far no success; Kay Francis motored to Arrowhead Springs yesterday to spend the week-end.

The Ring Lardners, jr., will welcome the stork this summer; Mrs. John Considine, jr., leaves for San Francisco to take a look at Johnnie in his uniform; Richard Greene, looking a little wan, out for the first time at the Cocoanut Grove with Virginia Field; The minute Cedric Gibbons boat docked from Honolulu he telephoned Dolores Del Rio.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Jenkins Flattens Ambers in Third for Title

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1940 17

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, May 10.—There comes to hand a note from Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller who would have it known that the world's featherweight championship will be at stake when Pete Scalzo steps into the ring against Frankie Covelli on Wednesday evening at Griffith Stadium. Mr. Miller would have it widely known.

POVICH

Ex-Pug Miller, and proud of it, is now president of the National Boxing Association and it seems that the N. B. A. is sponsoring the Scalzo-Covelli fight for what it calls the world title. Miller rises to the defense of that show as a title fight and incidentally to the defense of himself, because he is the gentleman who maneuvered the whole idea.

He wants not only a good fight on Wednesday evening, but he wants a big gate. No financial emoluments will accrue to Mr. Miller, himself, but a gate of, say, $10,000 would be a considerable feather in the chapeau of the N. B. A. which is not only sponsoring the fight but which, in turn, is being sponsored by Mr. Miller.

The particular yen for a big gate for an N. B. A. featherweight title fight at this time is easily understandable. The N. B. A. would like to put on the dog for a bit. It would like to stage a show that would outdraw Louisiana's "world featherweight title" fight between Perrin and Ruffin the other night, and it would like to point to a bigger gate than Baltimore's Archibald-Jeffra "world featherweight title" fight will draw later in the month.

If the N. B. A. can show that the N. B. A. featherweight title fight drew the most money then it will have license to do some pointing-with-pride and a bit of sneering at the Maryland and Louisiana champions. It is something of a personal matter, too, with Miller who started the whole business of voiding Joey Archibald's title and elevating Scalzo to the championship.

Over the telephone, Miller insists that "We've got the best fighter in the division. We've got the man who hit the champion on the chin and knocked him out," he says, referring obviously to Scalzo's two-round knockout of Archibald in an over-the-weight match more than a year ago. But here, you read his note:

"I see by the papers that down in New Orleans Ruffin won 9 of 15 rounds from Perrin but that Perrin got the decision—he always does in New Orleans. Maybe Pete Reilly wasn't so dumb when he refused to take Scalzo to New Orleans to box Ruffing for the title.

"Washington is getting the real featherweight title fight. Promoter Joe Turner's posters bill Scalzo as 'The man who knocked out Archibald,' and they bill Covelli as 'The man who knocked out Perrin.' That ought to give you a rough idea of how our two principals in the fight on Wednesday rate.

"I remember a situation something like it when Young Corbett fought Terry McGovern at Hartford, Conn., in 1901. McGovern was then the invincible 'Terrible Terry.' He was the big attraction of the day and the fight drew $20,880. Corbett was a pudgy little fellow out of Denver who was supposed to be just a fancy bag puncher.

"But Corbett belted McGovern out in two rounds. McGovern was sore after taking the count and swore at Corbett. 'You stopped me, but I'm still champion. You were overweight,' McGovern told Corbett. Corbett laughed. 'You keep the title, Terry,' he said, 'I'll just be known as the guy who knocked out McGovern.' The world recognized Corbett as the champion, just as it recognizes that Scalzo hung one on Archibald's chin and cooled him off in two rounds.

"So while Louisiana staged its one-State 'world title' fight and Maryland plans its two-State 'world title' fight, Washington and the N. B. A. is putting on 'The man who knocked out Archibald against the fellow who knocked out Perrin.' How is anybody going to dispute the championship calibre of that bout."

In referring to Baltimore's Archibald-Jeffra affair as a "two-State" title bout, Miller means, of course, that the bout is recognized by Maryland and New York. The latter State still considers Archibald the world champion, but Miller is given to sneering at New York State boxing rulings.

"New York is staging what it calls a lightweight title fight between Lou Ambers and Lew Jenkins and refuses to recognize Sammy Angott," says Miller. "That's a curious kind of match inasmuch as Jenkins was recently beaten by Pete Lello who was soundly thrashed by Angott. If that is logic, get me a straight jacket, because I'm a violent case."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 10.—What interests you?

The Preakness?—It must be years since a Kentucky Derby winner came up for the Preakness with so few enthusiastic backers as has Gallahadion, conqueror of Bimelech. The Mars colt neatly defeated by a length and a half the colt that a lot of the soberest authorities in racing called the greatest thing since Man o' War. And beat him on the kind of track Bimelech likes.

CONSIDINE

Now, one week later, Gallahadion is in just as good condition, worked fine mile in the mud Thursday, and gives every indication of runing just as well in the Pimlico classic as he did in his winning gallop of last week. But all signs point to the fact that Bimelech, who burned up a mint of sucker money in winter book bets, and at Churchill Downs and gambling traps all over America, will go to the post a favorite again tomorrow. If it's muddy, it wouldn't be surprising to see the Maryland-bred Pictor—a fine mudder—as second choice. And Gallahadion, with the Derby cheers still in his ears, no better than third choice.

Roy Waldron, Gallahadion's trainer, is a first-rate guy who will tell his friends all he knows before a race. Early on the afternoon of the Derby he marked a good friend's program for him, giving him a couple of fine winners, including Tough Hombre, whom he trained. He didn't mark the Derby itself, and the friend asked him why. "I just haven't the faintest idea who's going to win the thing," Waldron said. "Pick one yourself, and it will probably do better than anything I could name."

So not long later, and apparently to Roy's huge surprise, Waldron's own horse bobbed down there—at $72 for $2.

Baseball?—For all we know we may be in the midst of a couple of the season's most kee-rooshiai series this week-end. If the Red Sox can get the edge on the Yanks, and the Dodgers the edge on the Giants, the triumphs might well have deeper meaning than is immediately apparent.

The Red Sox are in a great spot. They can afford to lose a full series to the Yanks and still keep a comfortable lead over them. Last year it was just the reverse. The Sox in one series sliced five games off the lead of the Yankees, an exhausting spurt, but it hardly ruffled the Yankee lead. Now the shoe is on the other foot, thanks to the depressing start of the Yanks, and the bang-up getaway of the Sox. If the Sox outpace the Yanks in this series, and beat them deeper into the cellar, just when it is imperative that the Yanks get out of there, we may see the real beginning of the end of the greatest dynasty baseball ever knew.

As for the Dodgers and Giants, Leo Durocher has his squad going along suspended by a taut nerve. The Dodgers are playing over their heads, but this has happened before in baseball and will happen again. Their two losses up until the start of the Giant series indicated just how much pressure they had on their boilers—for as soon as they saw they were losing they fell wide open and let the enemy march across the plate like Bob Ripley's Chinese.

However, nothing can lift the spirits of a Dodger team as much as a series victory over the Giants. Give those Dodgers that victory and that taut nerve will strengthen until it is a cable which nothing might be able to snap. And by and by—if those Reds will only listen to reason—the Brooklyns might find their fools' paradise so pleasant that they'll decide to resist eviction.

The Fair? Latest addition to the trophy room at Christy Walsh's Academy of Sport is one of the shoes worn by Seabiscuit early last March when the Biscuit won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and became the all-time money-maker of the turf. The shoe was silvered and especially engraved by Charlie Howard.

The war and other emergencies took some of the interesting sports trophies out of Walsh's muscle mosque, including the Davis Cup. But among the many additions will be the "Clean Sweep Award." It is the celebrated, glass-encased broom, which has been in competition between the University of Washington and California for a generation. It goes for a one-year period to the school whose crews win the varsity, jayvee and freshmen races in the annual regatta. Another exhibit, new this year, will be a collection of all the press-box badges in World Series history—including that handsome and ill-starred badge the Pittsburgh ball club made up in September of 1938 for the expected series between the Yanks and Pirates. Gabby Hartnett hit a home run in the deep dusk of September 28 of that season to dump the Pirates out of that series.

Derby's Beaten Favorite Meets Longshot Winner in Today's Preakness

WILL HE GET REVENGE? Col. Bradley's Bimelech, last week's Derby choice who ran second, will again rule as the favorite in today's historic Preakness at Pimlico. Bimmey is held at 8 to 5 in the morning line

Bimelech Favored Today in Preakness

Shorter Distance Is Expected to Aid Him To Beat Gallahadion

Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance, Arnold Hanger's Dit, Mrs. Anthony Pelleteri's Sun Pharos and the Millsdale Stable's Andy K. Sun Pharos and Andy K are coupled as an entry, while Dit is the unsexed member of the field.

At least two of the nine are regarded as doubtful starters. Your Chance has not been on the track since his recent overnight race victory, his handler working frantically to relieve a slight filling in his leg. Sun Pharos will be scratched if the track is not muddy, his trainer says. If these two fail to face the starter, Jim Milton, the field will contain only one horse that did not go in the Derby.

A Problem Horse

The newcomer will be Andy K, rated second to Bimelech as a 2-year-old. The son of Jack High is the problem horse of the field. He came to the races this year apparently cured of his running-out habit of 1939, but went back into a slump at Havre de Grace, losing his chance of beating Pictor by going to the outside fence.

In the Wood Memorial he failed to run out but also failed to put on the drive expected of him and finished behind Dit. Tomorrow, Andy K will be among the longest shots in the field.

Gallahadion's brilliant stretch drive which turned back Bimelech at Churchill Downs appears to be forgotten as the public swings back to the Bradley star. The shorter distance of a mile and three-sixteenths of the Preakness, plus the promise of a fast track, has turned attention away from Gallahadion. In fact, there is a strong leaning toward Dit and the son of Transmute may be second choice in the betting, if not the favorite at post time.

Track Is Not "Cuppy"

The Bimelech boys contend that it was over this track that the son of Black Toney ran one of his best races last year, defeating, among others, Rough Pass in the Maryland Futurity. Then again they point out that he will not have a "cuppy" track. The absence of Roman, the sprinter which set the pace in the Derby, seems to indicate that Bimelech will attempt to go to the front at once and set his own pace. Trainer Bill Hurley's instructions to Jockey Freddie Smith of course are not known.

Mioland, the colt which was bred in Italy, raced in Germany and purchased by Charles S. Howard in Oregon, probably will draw support from those who are looking for a well-priced horse with a fair chance. Mioland finished fourth in the Derby and was making his first start in months.

Pictor, last in the Derby, is the "forgotten" horse of this year's Preakness. He is considered among the sure starters but even his Maryland friends cannot account for his dull effort at Churchill Downs. Trainer Lou Schaefer, as much at loss about Pictor as the man who bet $2 on him, expects the son of Challenger II to do better regardless of track conditions. Pictor still has the ace money rider, George Woolf to urge him along.

With the exception of Royal Man, which failed to show speed in the Derby, the jockeys will keep the mounts they had in the Kentucky classic. Washington's own Sonny Workman will be in Royal Man's saddle, out to win his second Preakness. The Capitol boy was up on H. P. Whitney's Victorian in 1928 and brought the Whisk Broom II colt up to win by a nose from E. B. McLean's Toro. Woolf is the only other jockey who has ridden a Preakness winner. He scored with Bold Venture in 1936.

If Sun Pharos goes postward, the jockey will be Eddie Smith, another Washingtonian. Smith has had a long career with only occasional success. He will be on a speed horse and his assignment probably will be to set a pace for Andy K., the stablemate.

Four of the candidates had their final works for their important engagement of tomorrow. The sensation of the morning was the fast work of Bimelech. The Bradley colt stepped three-eighths of a mile in 0:35 3-5 and finished out the half in 48 seconds. He was full of run and as frisky as a yearling after his "blowout."

Andy K, known as a speedster, went three-eighths in 36 seconds, while Your Chance breezed a half mile in 56 seconds.

Nats' Pitching Weak; Macks Victors, 8 to 7

Krakky, Masterson, Haynes, Routed; Walker Homers

By a Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, May 10.—The touring Nats hit Philadelphia today, and vice versa. Against three Washington pitchers who were progressively worse, the Athletics crossed the plate by almost every method except paarchute and slapped down the Washington club by a score of 8 to 7.

As late as the eighth inning, the Nats were holding a 6-5 lead, but that is where Walter Masterson came in. Previously, Joe Krakauskas had been lending aid and comfort to the enemy in great gobs, but young Masterson shamed them at the art.

Two were out in the eighth when Haynes started sabotaging the ball game. He pitched a single to Pitcher Chubby Dean to put the tying run on base, and then he pitched a single to Gene Lillard to put the winning run on base. At that point Manager Bucky Harris signaled Masterson to come out of the bullpen and take over the pitching job.

Haynes Walks Moses

Haynes was a no-hit pitcher compared to Masterson. The young righthander's first act was to walk Wally Moses and fill the bases. The next thing he did was to wild-pitch the tying run home with a throw into the dirt. Then he filled the bases again by walking McCoy.

Yankees Lose Seventh in Row As Bosox Win

New Yorkers Suffer Longest Losing Streak; Boston Wins, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

New York, May 10.—The fact that none of the Boston Red Sox runs was earned and that both of the runs made by the Yankees were legitimate, makes little difference. The Red Sox won, 3-2, and that's what the records carry.

That catapulted the Yankees into the longest losing streak they have ever had under the guidance of Manager Joe McCarthy. They have gone seven straight games without a victory.

The Yankees got away to what looked like a winning start as early as the second inning when Buster Mills, who was playing leftfield for the champions, belted a homer into the leftfield stands with Catcher Buddy Sosar on base.

The Sox tied the score in the seventh on hits by Joe Cronin and Bobby Doerr, fumbles by Pitcher Spud Chandler and Rosar and a double-play ball hit by Johnny Peacock, on which Doerr scored after Cronin had come in on Rosar's wild heave to first.

In the tenth, Peacock scored the winning run when he singled, and advanced on Frank Crosetti's muff of Babe Dahlgren's throw on Jack Wilson's bunt. With the infield in close, Roger Cramer hit to Crosetti

Lew Jenkins Stops Ambers in 3d Round

Sweetwater Swatter Wins New York Version of Lightweight Title as Near-Capacity Crowd Roars Surprise

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Madison Square Garden, New York, May 10.—The champion took it on the chin tonight in a startling 7-minute blitzkrieg unleashed by a title-hungry cow kid from Texas, and the world's lightweight crown passed into the keeping of Lew Jenkins.

Lou Ambers surrendered his title after 1 minute and 29 seconds of the third round as he tottered helpless in his own corner, his brain befogged by ceaseless punching, his legs rubbery mockeries and his face a puffy mask.

Four times he was dumped on the floor by the 3-to-1 underdog from Sweetwater, Tex., in a punching display that transformed the Garden's 19,000 customers into a shrieking, sensation-filled mob which had scented the crowning of a new champion as early as the first round.

The Ambers who had never been knocked out in his life, who had beaten McLarnin and Armstrong and Montanez, and who entered the right tonight a prohibitive favorite to dispatch the blond, curly-haired kid from Texas, was a gone guy almost from the opening bell.

Referee Billy Kavanaugh awarded the fight to Jenkins after the second knockdown of the third round as Ambers reeled into his own corner. He put a question to Ambers and then on his own responsibility

Sir Marlboro Wins In Fastest Time Of 'Gansett Meeting

Pawtucket, R. I., May 10 (AP).—Back on a fast track after a losing effort in mud a week ago, Connie Smythe's Sir Marlboro ran the fastest 6 furlongs of the Narragansett Park meeting today as he won the featured Berkeley purse in 1:10 4-5

Nannykins Takes $5,000 Pimlico Nursery in Photo Finish

Liberio, The Favorite, Beaten Out

Winner Puts on a Powerful Drive to Take Feature; Pays His Backers $14.20

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 10.—Refusing to quit as her past performances suggested she would, E. K. Bryson's Nannykins ran a powerful race today to survive a photo finish and win the historic Pimlico Nursery, $5,000 added 2-year-old feature of the spring meeting here. Answering the urging of Jockey Al Shelhamer the flight but usually faint-hearted daughter of Wise Counsellor and Nancy Jane finished a head in front of Liberio, owned by C. Andrade 3d, and an easy winner in his previous race. In the thick of the final battle from start to finish, H. M. Babylon's Becomly was a fast-moving third.

The crowd of 12,000 played Liberio as if the race had already been run and, apparently thought little of Nannykins' chances. She drew a lukewarm backing and produced a $14.20 mutuel. The Maryland-owned winner recorded time of 1:01, matching the best time of the stake since it has been at the five-furlong distance but being four-fifths of a second above the track record of 1:00 1-5 set by Bother.

Nannykins broke alertly and soon took the lead over Becomly, opening daylight on Liberio, and Becomly going to the turn. Entering the stretch, Liberio, ridden by Basil James, came to the inside of the leader and began a head and head battle. Nannykins bore out in the stretch run, but she kept plugging along. Nearing the finish line Becomly made a bold effort to drive between the pair.

Well-played winners figured in both ends of the daily double. After Sun Ginger defeated juveniles in the first event to pay $5, Tiny Trick came on the track and downed a limit field of a dozen to return an individual mutuel of $9. Those who placed the pair in the "double," collected $28.90.

The day's steeplechase was one for the books. When Mrs. V. L. Black's Kosan crossed the finish line, the mare was the only one of six starters still in action. Kosan and Tellmore had come into the fifteenth fence, running side by side, and the only members of the field still running. Tellmore fell, leaving Kosan to jog to the wire. Jockey C. Brooks remounted and finished out the course to take down the place money. Falls, runouts and lost riders accounted for the others. Kosan paid $8.90.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN GINGER, $5.00, $3.70, $2.70; HY-HAPPY (Long-Bedwell entry), $7.40, $4.80; LONG LANE, $3.60.

SUN GINGER took command at once, withstood continual challenges of HY-HAPPY, bore out in stretch, but held away to end. HY-HAPPY was hard ridden from start and held on gamely in final test. LONG LANE was forward factor throughout, but could not threaten seriously while under pressure in final eighth. BRIGHT ARC saved ground from start and was held safe.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:51½. Off 2:53½. Winner, Mrs. H. S. Norkneimer's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TINY TRICK, $9.00, $4.60, $3.50; GREENY, $4.00, $2.80; SHAILLEEN, $4.80.

TINK TRICK, sent up on inside to better position gradually, responded willingly when placed to intermittent punishment to take command and barely staved off GREENY'S closing bid. The latter, taken up when in close quarters at start, came wide while moving up boldly and closed with belated rush. SHAILLEEN raced on outside while closest to pace and held on gamely in closing test.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KOSAN, $8.90, $4.60, $4.70; TELL MORNE, $9.60, $8.00.

KOSAN, not hurried in early stages, worked way to TELL MORNE at final fence and won by himself when latter fell. TELL MORNE, first away, set good pace, was under hard drive when he fell at fifteenth fence and was remounted to finish. LISDOONVARNA was closest to pacemaker when he fell at twelfth fence. CASTLE KOCH was pulled up after bad landings at first and ninth fence. MASKED KNIGHT fell at seventh. DESERTER lost rider at third.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,300. The Stafford Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:50½. Off 3:51. Winner, Mrs. F. B. Ponce's b. m. (5), by Zacaweista—Battle of Flowers. Trained by C. P. Ponce. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:36⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKETCHBOOK, $7.10, $4.20, $2.60; FLYING LEE, $4.50, $2.70; CHARLOTTE GIRL, $2.30.

SKETCHBOOK, off alertly, was steadied along while closest to CANTERUP'S pace, took command when asked and drew out to win well in hand. FLYING LEE dwelt at break, was hurried to contention and was tiring at close. CHARLOTTE GIRL had no excuses. CANTERUP went to front at once, set good pace, but weakened gradually after being displaced. WHITE SAND walked out of gate and trailed field far back throughout.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. The Manchester Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:22. Off 4:22½. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZAYIN, $20.60, $10.80, $3.40; RUN BY, $15.80, $4.70; RINGIE (entry), $2.20.

ZAYIN, prominent from break, moved up boldly approaching half pole to get to front and withstood repeated challenges from RUN BY to last under vigorously handling. RUN BY moved up fast and fought it out willingly. RINGIE could not keep up in early stages and rallied mildly in final drive. HARD WAY made up ground to midstretch and hung.

SIXTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Pimlico Nursery Stakes. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:50½. Off 4:52½. Winner, E. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NANNYKINS, $14.20, $4.40, $3.00; LIBERIO, $3.00, $2.50; BECOMLY, $3.00.

NANNYKINS had keen speed from break, opened good lead to turn and withstood long drive while bearing out in stretch.; LIBERIO was steadied only while close up in early stages, responded when placed to drive and fought it out willingly on inside. BECOMLY was in thick of contention from start and closed with good energy.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:21. Off 5:21½. Winner, W. Elliott's g. ch. m. CAREFUL MISS dropped in opening stages, went to outside to make move, went around leader in drive to wire and just lasted to stave off bid of GREEDAN. The latter, within striking distance from start, went to extreme outside for stretch drive and was catching winner. IN MEMORY forced pace for half, took command when PATSEY BEGONE tired, held on well, but was not good enough.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:51. Off 5:51½. Winner, P. M. Nagle's b. g. At the Post

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

I'm going to take Gallahadion, Dit and Bimelech in that order in today's Preakness and I have been swayed by the post positions as much as anything else. In the first place, Gallahadion ran to his Derby victory along the rail from No. 1 post position. Today he has No. 2 and, in the event that Sun Pharos is scratched, he will be back on the rail. He demonstrated his ground-saving ability at Louisville. He packed the punch that decided the issue down there. I believe he could have turned on the heat early if Jockey Bierman had so elected. Therefore, the shorter route of the Preakness should not bother him. In addition, I believe Gallahadion is the best conditioned horse in the gang. I'm placing Dit before Bimelech for reason of the post positions. Dit is No. 3 on the inside of Bimelech and should they come into the stretch together again, Dit should be on the inside instead of being carried out as was the case at Churchill Downs. Dit was bothered some in the Derby But I doubt if he could have beaten Gallahadion with better racing luck that day. Much has been said and written about Bimelech "not fancying the cuppy track" at Churchill Downs. From where I sat, Bimelech did not appear to like the route. Today's distance is a sixteenth of a mile shorter which would seem to favor him. Still harping on post positions, Bimelech must break on the outside of and next to Andy K. What Andy K. will do on a race track is anybody's guess. He could prove the undoing of Bimelech early. Confucius is something of a traitor. He say: Put my $2 bucks on MIOLAND.

BILL.

First race—Walkaway showed good effort when competing against this field in his last race but was a trifle short. With that race under his belt, he receives top figure. Spinach rates a chance off his last race. Axacan, beaten by the top horse in his last, figures best of the others.

Second race—Attracting took the worst of the breaks in her last Havre race but still managed to earn third place. Meeting a similar field today she should win. Miss Maker showed a good effort against older horses in her last and merits a good figure. Nicky has a good money chance.

Third race—Scout Time ran a game race last outing to finish third to White Time beaten a length in 53 4-5 seconds, 4-5 of a second off the record. Misty Meadow ran second to Pete jr. in his last in mediocre time and rates second call. Oboe is a well-bred first-time starter which brought $4,700 as a yearling.

Fourth race—Bonzar comes down from Jamaica where he ran second in a class C handicap in creditable time. His competition here is speedy but he appears equal to a winning effort. Skin Deep was a stakes performer last year but may need this race. Purcellville figures much the best of the others.

Fifth race—Slow Motion finished in third place behind his stablemate Battle Jack, in the Jennings Handicap, running in fast time. Meeting an inferior field today, he should earn the brackets. Lady Maryland finished a length behind the top horse in that heat and rates next best. Legal Light for show.

Sixth race—I'm sticking to Gallahadion, Dit and Bimelech.

Seventh race—Brown Twig likes this track and though making his seasonal bow, demonstrated his superiority over platers of this type in races last year. Easter Holiday has run two good races and will be primed for best effort. Barbed Retort is in form and receives a good figure.

Eighth race—Pompeius closed well when sprinting last week to finish third to Kaptime in his first start since last fall. He drops down the claiming scale today. Gen L has run several good races over local tracks and should earn second money. Winning Mark

Eastern Rallies and Turns Back Western in Tenth, 8 to 5

Earhardt's Bat, Hurling Net Victory

Chunky Star Stops Rivals as a Relief Hurler After Sixth; Raps Two Singles

Interhigh Standings

	W.	L.	Pct.		W.	L.	Pct.

Eastern	3	1	.750	Tech	2	3	.200
Western	2	1	.666	Anacostia	0	3	.000
Roosevelt	1	2	.333

Plugging along at a one-run-per-inning rate for five successive innings, Eastern High nine finally caught up in the ninth and went ahead to trample Western, 8-5, in the tenth inning of an interhigh clash at Western yesterday.

With the victory the White Tide took over second place in the standings, at the same time eliminating Western from the undefeated class and sending it to third.

To Warren Earhardt, the chunky fire-baller who was pounded from the mound in his last series start, went the bulk of credit for the Tide's third triumph in four starts. That is, to Earhardt and exceedingly timely hitting off the slants of the Raiders' Carmel Nance.

Bats in Tying Run

Earhardt replaced Kenny Deavers with one out and men on first and second in the sixth. Eastern was on the short end of a 5-2 count at the time. The squat hurler retired the next two men and went the rest of the way with only two hits charged against him. In addition, he smacked clean singles to center in both his times at bat, the second scoring Eddie Teague with the tying run in the ninth.

Starting with the fifth, when Bill Hite slammed a home run into left field, the Tide registered one counter in every inning until the tenth, winding up with a convincing trio of tallies to win. Hite's homer, incidentally, was slightly tainted in that Outfielder Joe Withers tumbled on his face after two steps in pursuit of the ball.

"Lefty" Gatton Homers

Another circuit clout accounted for the Tide's sixth-inning run, this one going to "Lefty" Gatton, leftfielder. His blow sailed well over the fence in rightfield as Wrenn helplessly looked on.

In the tenth it took three singles, a pair of errors and as many stolen bases to win the game. Infielder Walsh, whose three errors stole dubious honors in that department, starred in the inning when his single sent Paul Cohill home from second and Torbert home from third.

Nance, who pitched brilliant relief work to beat Wilson in an extra-inning battle earlier in the week, was touched for 11 safeties by the Easterners. The fact that the game went into an overtime made Western's season unanimous. In each of their three starts the Raiders have been unable to settle the issue in regulation time.

Central Beats Tech As Steiner Stars

Benny Steiner's booming bat wiped out two Tech leads and set Central High's championship baseball team on the path to its fourth consecutive interhigh triumph yesterday, a 9-to-5 victory over McKinley, at Central Stadium.

With Tech holding a 1-to-0 lead, Steiner stepped to the plate in the fourth inning and walloped a home run to deep center to tie the score. Then again in the fifth inning, with the invaders on the long end of a 4-to-1 score, Steiner stepped into the breach with the bases full, picked out Charley Green's first pitch and blasted it for three bases to again knot the count.

Steiner scored on an outfield fly a moment later to give the Vikings a lead they never relinquished. Tech fought back valiantly, getting men on base every inning after that, but failed to score until it registered a final marker in the ninth.

Billy Fisher was being batted around thoroughly by Tech's surprisingly strong batting attack, however. Ten hits were registered by McKinley, although when men were on bases Fisher tightened perceptibly and weathered each storm.

After being held to two hits for the first three innings the Mount Pleasanters began spraying base hits to all premises of the diamond and before the assault on two Trainer pitchers was brought to an end they had accumulated 17 safe blows.

The victory, combined with Western's loss, gave Central undisputed possession of first place in the interhigh standings.

Smiling Winners in Arlington Hall Horse Show

Show Girl Wins Hack Class at Arlington

Our Chance Is Second; Every School Receives Ribbon in Show; Cadet Culpeper Rides Jump Winner for Host School

By Anne Hagner

Ribbons were distributed among every school that was represented in the opening session of the Arlington Hall Horse Show, which began yesterday at the campus of the Virginia college and continues all day today.

Most important jumping event on the card went to a mount owned by the host school and ridden by Cadet Fred Culpeper, of Virginia Military Academy, who showed the way to a long list of jumpers with Mary Pickford, a bay mare who has hitherto been regarded as mere addenda to Arlington's string of leapers.

Second place in the class, restricted to student riders, went to the Warrenton Country School's steady gray gelding, Papy, with young Alice Headley up. Papy, who has been carrying Warrenton pupils over fences for many years, turned in an excellent round to defeat Jean Holden on Arlington Hall's most recent acquisition, Comanche. Floating Cloud, sparkling gray hunter from Robert Young's Allentown, Pa., stables, placed fourth with Barbara Young riding.

Attracts 34 Entrants

In the student hack class, which attracted 34 entrants, Anne Hagner's Show Girl triumphed over Warrenton Country School's Our Chance, second place winner. Third went to 13-year-old Elizabeth Marsh on Cricket, and fourth was taken by Light McGee, recent champion of the Warrenton school's show with Owner Sally Spilman up.

The advanced horsemanship class was completely dominated by the host school's representatives, as Susan Rinehart won or Applejack; Sally Seward placed second on her own Main Spring; Jean Holden took another yellow ribbon with Comanche, and Ellie Leh rode her King Rock, well-known jumper, for fourth place.

Today's program commences at 9 a. m. with a well-filled class for junior hunters and continues with junior jumpers, novice hunters, novice jumpers, intercollegiate jumping, lightweight hunters, handicap jumping, road hacks, Maryland University Arlington Hall challenge class, middle and heavyweight hunters, the "Kismet special," which is a go-as-you-like event; corinthian, high-pumping contest, working hunters, $200 jumper stake, and hunters under saddle.

More Entries Expected

Post entries are expected to add even more competition to the already formidable list, including Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Abdication, Billy Do, Sly Portia and Big Boy; Mrs. D. N. Lee's Glory Road, Red Fox and Speed Demon; Charles Carrico's Recall; Anna Hedrick's Madrigal Tom; Fred Hughes' Black Caddy; Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho; 12 horses from the ranks of Fort Myer's open jumpers; Eddie Talbert with He'll Try and Good Friday, and Patricia Henry with Gabby's Scamp.

The high-jumping contest is scheduled for 4 p. m., and is regarded as the feature of the day as it is the first of its kind to be held in the vicinity.

Today's activities will close with the awarding of hunter and jumper championships and a musical drill, staged by 24 Arlington Hall girls in uniform.

Virginia Nine Whips Terps; Errors Help

Chuck Walsh's Fifth Hit Drives In Winning Run

By Jack Munhall

Despite the visitors' reluctance to accept such generosity, the University of Maryland finally succeeded in making Virginia a gift of their ball game yesterday at College Park.

Climaxing a sloppy performance by both teams, the Terrapins committed their third and fourth errors of the game in the ninth inning and the Cavaliers capitalized on them for the decisive run in a 5-4 victory. Chuck Walsh's fifth straight single drove home Will Harman, who had reached second on a two-base wild throw by Second Baseman Adam Bengoechea.

Even then the Charlottesville gang needed further assistance from Maryland in protecting their slim lead going into the home half of the final frame, for Bert Culver, lead-off Terp batter, drew a walk. But they got aid, almost immediately. With Catcher Bob Burns at bat Culver was thrown out by 5 feet attempting to steal second base and the Terrapins then went out in order.

Apparently Burns had been ordered to bunt the pitch on which Culver tried his larceny, but although the ball was over the plate the Maryland catcher missed his swing.

Cavaliers Make Five Errors

It was a strange demonstration of baseball which fetched Virginia its second victory of the season over the Terrapins and its fifteenth against three losses. The Cavaliers kicked in with five errors to bring to nine the total for the game, and four of the nine runs scored were directly or indirectly the result of miscues.

Still the game had its interesting side, including several fine stops and throws by Luke Gosney and Bill McGann, Virginia shortstop and second baseman; three snappy double plays by Virginia, Walsh's five-for-five hitting and some alternately bad and good pitching by Frank Nichols, for Virginia, and Pershing Mondorff, for Maryland, both of whom lasted the route.

Mondorff, warming to his task slowly, surrendered eight hits and four runs in the first three innings. With the start of the fifth, however, he settled down and allowed only three safeties thereafter. Nichols, chalking up his fifth victory without defeat, was more consistent, scattering seven Maryland hits so that not more than two fell in any one inning.

Episcopalians Defeat Saints; Buck Winner

Alexandria Nine Wins Over St. Christopher's Of Richmond, 7 to 4

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., May 10.—Episcopal High School kept its record unblemished in the race for non-military prep school honors today, turning back St. Christopher's School, of Richmond, 7-4, in a loosely played contest. The Maroons need only a victory over their traditional foe, Woodberry Forest, of Orange, in their final game of the year to clinch the mythical title.

Al Ritzenberg Upset Loser In Net Tourney

Third-Seeded Terp Beaten by Carver, Tarheel Grid Star

Durham, N. C., May 10.—Zan Carver, North Carolina football player, supplied the only upset today in the Southern Conference tennis tournament by defeating third-seeded Al Ritzenberg, of Maryland, 6—3, 6—4, in the third round.

Carver came back later in the day and won a quarter-final match over a teammate, Anthony, 6—3, 6—2.

In semifinals tomorrow he will meet another teammate, second-seeded Charlie Rider, who had defeated Anthoine, of Duke, in the second round, 6—1, 6—1, Gantt, of V. M. I., in the third round, 6—2, 6—2, and Askin, of Maryland, in quarter-finals, 6—2, 6—2.

In the upper bracket semifinal top-seeded Don Buffington, of Duke, will meet Harris Everett, of North Carolina, No. 4. Buffington's victims today were Royal, of Maryland, 6—3, 6—3; Burkon, of Maryland, 6—3, 6—3, and Ager, of Duke, 6—3, 6—1. Everett eliminated Baker, of North Carolina State, 6—2, 6—2; Jordan, of North Carolina, 6—3, 6—4, and Rawlings, also of North Carolina, 6—2, 6—3.

No-Hit, No-Run Game Pitched By Mount Ace

The thing for which all pitchers aspire—a no-hit, no-run performance—came to Laylor Loomis, of Mount Rainier High, yesterday as Laurel High went down to a 16-0 defeat. Only eight men reached first base in the seven-inning battle.

Five of the trips to first base resulted from bases on balls off Loomis and the other three on errors, of which the Mounts made three. Laurel was charged with 6 to account for its loss almost as much as 16 base hits off three pitchers.

Albert Senior was responsible for five of the winning runs. He had one home run in the first with one man on base and another in the fourth with two on. Jack Hughes kicked in with a triple in the fourth that sent two mates home, closing out a seven-run inning. The Mounts have now won six and lost two

Blair Defeats Anacostia, 6-5, In Slugfest

Four Triples, Homer And Double Are Hit; Norris Is Hero

Extra-base hits fell all over the Anacostia High ball park yesterday as the home team, despite the use of a trio of hurlers, lost a 6-5 decision to Montgomery Blair High. One double, four triples and a homer were registered.

It was Johnny Norris' home run down the leftfield line in the fifth that proved the winning margin, two mates scampering home in front of him. The towering right-hander also was credited with the victory when he hurled nine-hit ball and struck out 12.

Second Baseman Cassidy also had a double in the fifth, while Schrier and Carter had triples in the previous frame. Anacostia's Elmer Leukhardt rapped a triple in the third and stole home to tie the count at 1-1, and Lambert Anderson slugged for three bases in the eighth but was thrown out attempting to duplicate Leukhardt's stunt.

Two District Girls Named SportHeads At Sweet Briar

Sweet Briar, Va., May 10.—Two Washington girls have been chosen student heads of sports for next year at Sweet Briar College. Miss Helen Gwinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Gwinn, of Chevy Chase, will be head of riding and Miss Edith Brainerd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Brainerd, of 2234 California street, will be head of archery.

The annual horse show which is held as a part of the May Day festival brings to a climax the year's work. Miss Gwinn rode in this year's horse show which took place on May 3 and won several ribbons including a red in the trail class and a white in the advanced horsemanship class. In addition to her activity in sports Miss Gwinn had been a member of the choreography group and Q. V., honorary sophomore society, and has made an excellent academic record, having been on the dean's list both semesters of her sophomore year and being one of the honor junior students this year.

Gilbert Mayo to Face 'Baby' Escobar Monday

"Baby" Escobar, Puerto Rican protege of Arthur (Pa) Godwin, has been elected to induct Gilbert Mayo, Alexandria featherweight, into the professional fight business Monday night at Riverside stadium on the card featuring Jorge Brescia and Roy Lazer in a 10-round bout.

Mayo, who won the 1940 Golden Gloves title over Willie Tapp, has built up a large following with his spectacular style of fighting. He'll face Escobar in a four-rounder for his pro debut.

Irish Captain Hits Homer to Beat Navy

Blow in Ninth Brings a 5-to-4 Victory to Notre Dame at Annapolis; Middie Errors Help Irish to Score

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, May 10.—Capt. Chet Sullivan slammed out a home run in the ninth inning today to give Notre Dame a 5-to-4 victory over the Naval Academy baseball nine.

Washington Store Sales Gain 4.8%

Fifth District Total Up 6.7 in 4 Months, Reserve Bank Notes

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., May 10.—Department store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District for the first four months averaged a 6.7 per cent increase over the total sales for the same period last year, the Federal Reserve Bank's statistical bureau announced today.

April sales showed a 2.3 per cent gain, but of the 33 stores reporting for last month only 19 sold more than in 1939.

Washington was up 4.8.

Comparisons follow: Increases, Boston, 8 per cent; New York, 2; Philadelphia, 3; Cleveland, 8; St. Louis, 8; Kansas City, 6; Dallas, 5, and San Francisco, 4. Decreases, Atlanta, 1 per cent, and Chicago, 1.

Bendix Aviation

Bendix Aviation Corporation and subsidiaries reported for the quarter ended March 31, 1940, net income of $1,933,880, equal to 92 cents a share on the capital stock and comparing with $1,023,996, or 49 cents a share, in the like 1939 quarter.

Anaconda Copper

Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and subsidiaries earned net profit of $10,517,636, equal to $1.21 a share, in the March quarter. This compared with $3,686,911, or 42 cents in the March quarter of 1939.

Technicolor

Directors of Technicolor Inc. declared a dividend of 50 cents a common share, payable June 15 to holders of record June 3. The dividend, first this year, compared with last year's payments of 35 cents in July, 25 cents in October and 40 cents December.

Western Union

Western Union Telegraph Co. today reported net income for the three months ended March 31 of $210,472, equal to 20 cents a share, compared with a deficit of $818,482 in the comparable 1939 period.

Curtiss-Wright, Atlas Merger Is Called Off

New York, May 10 (AP).—The proposed merger of Atlas Corporation, big Wall street investing firm, and the aircraft manufacturing firm of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, into a $160,000,000 combine was called off today.

Floyd Odlum, president of Atlas, announced abandonment of the plans on the grounds that in his opinion "certain of the objections" raised by Curtiss-Wright stockholders "could not be met in any way that seemed feasible to him."

Recently two Boston investing companies and Massachusetts Investors Trust, a holder of 21,700 shares of class "A" stock, presented strong objections to the merger to the Curtiss-Wright board.

Winter Wheat Crop Estimate Goes Upward

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department estimated the winter wheat crop at 459,691,000 bushels yesterday on the basis of May 1 conditions.

This compared with 426,215,000 bushels estimated a month ago; 263,431,000 bushels produced last year, and 571,067,000 bushels, the 1929-38 ten-year average production.

The yield per acre of winter wheat was estimated at 13.5 bushels, compared with 14.9 last year, and 14.3, the ten-year average.

Winter wheat was sown last fall to 45,014,000 acres, of which 34,076,000 acres remain for harvest. Abandonment of acreage throught the winter amounted to 24.3 per cent of the acreage sown, compared with 18.5 per cent for the 1939 crop, and 14.3 per cent the average abandonment during the ten years, 1929-38.

The estimated production of rye was reported as 36,476,000 bushels, based on May 1 conditions, compared with 39,249,000 bushels last year, and 38,095,000 bushels, the ten-year average. The acre yield is estimated at 11.3 bushels, compared with 10.3 last year and 11.4, the ten-year average.

The indicated acre yield and total yield of winter wheat, in principal producing States, follow:

New York, 21.0 bushels per acre, and total 5,985,000 bushels; Pennsylvania, 19.0 and 17,556,000; Ohio 19.0 and 36,537,000; Indiana, 17.5 and 26,355,000; Illinois, 17.5 and 30,712,000; Michigan, 20.5 and 15,66 ,000; Iowa, 17.5 and 5,688,000; Missouri, 14.0 and 23,044,000; Nebraska, 10.0 and 22,220,000; Kansas, 9.0 and 65,079,000; Oklahoma, 8.5 and 31,178,000; Texas, 9.0 and 26,172,000; Montana 18.0 and 21,474,000; Idaho, 25.0 and 16,425,000; Washington, 26.0 and 29,406,000; Oregon, 22.0 and 14,088,000; California, 18.5 and 14,338,000.

Cotton Tumbles 30 to 45 Points On War's Spread

New York, May 10 (AP).—Heavy selling based directly on war expansion engulfed the cotton futures market today. Final prices, only a shade above the day's worst, were down 30 to 45 points.

Judge Orders Follansbee Asset Transfer

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 10.—Federal Judge R. M. Gibson today ordered transfer of assets of the Follansbee Brothers company to the New Follansbee Steel Corporation as provided in a plan of reorganization.

The new firm will have assets of approximately $10,000,000 after writing off nearly $3,000,000 for obsolescence of equipment. The assets include a 93.6 per cent stock ownership of the Sheet Metal Specialty Co., at Follansbee, W. Va., where the corporation's main plant is located.

Under the reorganization plan, approved by the U. S. District Court January 6, the corporation has raised approximately $2,500,000 of new money, secured by a loan of $2,100,000 from the Union National Bank of Pittsburgh, the First National Bank of Pittsburgh, and the National City Bank of New York, with a guarantee up to $1,850,000 by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The new company has been authorized to issue up to 650,000 shares of common stock, par value $10 a share, and 35,000 shares of preferred stock, with a par value of $100. Application will be made to list both stock issues on the New York Stock Exchange.

War Sends Rubber Price Skyward

New York, May 10 (AP).—Rubber for delivery this month bounded up 3.08 cents a pound to 23.50 cents in the commodity exchange today. Contracts for delivery in future months climbed the 2-cent-a-pound limit permitted in a single day's trading.

Grains Soar Despite Heavy Profit-Taking

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 10.—The long-dreaded German push westward caused an immediate stampede to buy grains today, but, after prices of principal cereals had advanced 2½ to 5 cents a bushel, the excited trading pits were thrown into more confusion by heavy selling and profit taking that caused sharp reactions at times.

Wheat rose 3⅞ to 5 cents almost at the opening bell; corn was up 2⅜ to 2⅝, to the highest level since 1937; Rye, 3⅛ to 3¼, and oats, ¾ to 1¼. September wheat sold as high as 1.10, and corn as high as 70 cents. New speculative buying, short covering and some wheat purchasing, credited to mills, appeared.

Wheat closed 1⅛ to ¾ cents higher than yesterday, with May 1.08¾ to 1.08⅞, and July, 1.08⅜ to 1.08⅝. Corn fell 1½ from the highs, but closed 1½ to 2⅛ higher than yesterday; May, 68¼ to 68; July 6⅛; July, 69 to 68⅞. Oats closed ¼ to 1¼ up; rye, 3 higher; soy beans, ⅜ lower to ⅞ higher, and lard, 25 to 30 higher.

Auto Output To Dip Slightly

Detroit, May 10 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that this week's output of the automobile factories would be 98,480 units, compared with 99,305 last week, and 72,375 this week a year ago.

The survey referred to production activity as continuing "in firm ground," and said that this week's slight dip might be followed by somewhat of a rebound in the forthcoming production period.

FHA Title 1 Loans Keep Steady Pace

Active D. C. Demand For Insured Mortgages Reported for Area

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Local Federal Housing Administration loans of title 1 classification are keeping up with those made a year ago and there is also an active demand for insured mortgages in this area. Loans made by banks and other lending institutions under Title I of the National Housing Act compare favorably in number and volume with 1939's correspinding period, it is reported by the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Since inception of the housing act amendments, banks and other lending institutions located in the National Capital had granted through March 31, 1940, 1,992 Title I Federal Housing Administration loans amounting to $879,804.99. For the same time Title I loans of this Federal agency made on District of Columbia property by banks and other lending institutions not necessarily located here, amounted to 1,727, totaling $735,127.68 in value.

From the time Title II FHA loans became effeftive to the close of March, 1940, insured mortgages accepted on property within the District totaled 1,756 and aggregated $11,004,950 in volume. Cumulative figures for the entire Nation reveal that as of March 31, 552,956 insured mortgage loans had been made for a total of $2,356,539,050.

During the first quarter of 1940, home mortgage recordings on urban property by all types of lenders amounted to $818,731,000, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board estimates. This total presents a gain of 12 per cent above the comparative period a year ago.

Totaling $300,420,000, March home financing was 18 per cent greater than in February and 6 per cent above that of March, last year, according to the board's division of research and statistics. A monthly survey by the division is confined to mortgages of $20,000 or less on non-farm property.

Savings and loan associations accounted for almost half of the business gains shown by all mortgagees in the first three months of 1940, the associations' recordings of $247,899,000 marking an advance of 21 per cent. Associations made the best progress of any lending group in March over February, and also over March, 1939, their $96,244,000 in recordings being an increase of 25 per cent and 16 per cent over the two respective months.

Distribution of Loans

Distribution of recordings by type of lenders and per cent of total in the first quarter of this year follows: Savings and loan associations, $247,899,000, 30.3 per cent; banks and trust companies, $204,057,000, 24.9 per cent; individuals, $144,955,000, 17.7 per cent; insurance companies, $66,423,000, 8.1 per cent; mutual savings banks, $30,548,000, 3.7; others, $124,849,000, 15.3; totals, $818,731,000, 100 per cent.

Stockholders of Anacostia Bank held their annual meeting this week and reelected the following directors: J. F. Campbell, R. U. Cooper, Frank M. Dent, George S. King, W. L. Koontz, George S. Maier, J. B. Pyles, Ernest J. Reed, Elmer M. Smith, L. W. Thompson, Robert Thompson and Irving Yochelson. Directors reelected the following officers: J. F. Campbell, president; W. L. Koontz, vice president and cashier; L. W. Thompson, vice president, Carl C. Smuck, W. W. Young and Allen H. Cannon, assistant cashiers; George C. Gertman, attorney. The administrative year just closed was one of the best in the bank's history.

Today the women's committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will hold a tea and fashion shop at Pierre's, Connecticut avenue at Q street northwest, styles being presented by The Hecht Co.

War Changes Copper

New York, May 10 (AP).—Cash copper quotations of 11 cents a pound posted by outside and custom smelter quarters today were withdrawn as the European war widened. Primary producers continued to quote 11½ cents a pound, Connecticut Valley, for electrolytic metal. In future markets, prices indicated a basis of around 11¾ cents a pound, delivered in the valley.

Street Takes Worst Shock Since 1929 In Stock Nosedive Set Off by Blitzkrieg; Commodities Soar; Bonds, Exchange Crumble

New York, May 10.—Wall Street got one of its greatest shocks today when Germany applied its blitzkrieg tactics to Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, with some scattered bombing over neutral Switzerland and also over sections of France and England.

Here are the effects as noted in the financial world:

The New York Stock Market, after opening irregularly higher, broke after an hour's trading and the ticker ran five minutes late with heavy selling, which was stemmed before the close, but left speculative leaders down 1 to 5 points.

United States Government bonds were weak and foreign government bonds broke badly, with Canadian, Scandinavian, Japanese and British dominions off 1 to 7 points and a few isolated issues closing off 25 points.

Exchange Topsy Turvy

Britain's sterling opene at $3, its low since the days of King Arthur, but closed with a rally at $3.15½. President Roosevelt suspended dealings in belgas, guilders and Luxembourg francs and "froze" about $1,600,000,000 of assets in this country belonging to nationals of Holland and its possessions, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Here was the major shock since 1929, and on the whole the financial machinery of the United States took it with the tested equanimity of a veteran of many reverses. There was no panic, even though the world was being stood on end. At the close the composite average was off 1.10 points, with the best resistance shown by the metals, equipments and miscellaneous manufacturing issues. Trading was heavy, the big board's volume of 2,086,240 being the largest since April 19. The break in the composite average was the sharpest since September 18. Bonds were at a new low average.

War stocks dominated the tape. Most active stock was Curtiss-Wright, off ⅜. Steel was down about a point and Bethlehem a small fraction. Paper issues weakened, with International off 1⅝. Lockheed was off 1½, General Motors 2⅜, United States Rubber 3⅜ and United Aircraft 2. More prominent losses included Chrysler, 5¼; Loft, 4½; Union Pacific, 4½, and Westinghouse, 3⅜.

Spot Copper Rises

Spot copper rose ½ cent to 11½ cents a pound and spot tin jumped 4⅜ cents to 52 cents, nominal. There was a good demand for lead and zinc, but without a price rise.

In futures markets there was wild trading, with the largest trading in rubber since September 15, and with May up 308 points and other contracts up 200. All raw sugar offerings were withdrawn. Steel scrap was marked up another 50 cents a ton in Pittsburgh.

The situation in foreign exchanges was a direct reflection of the war. Sterling and French francs were severely depressed in early dealings, the former breaking 35¼ cents to $3, the lowest price ever recorded. Francs opened here at 0.0170, off 20 points.

Sharp Reverse in Bonds

Widening warfare in Europe was reflected in the listed bond market today by sharp reverses in all classes of domestic bonds and sensational recessions in foreign dollar issues. The turnover increased to somewhat more than $10,000,000, as holders endeavored to get out of the way of the effects of blitzkrieg. Foreign bonds fell 1 to 25 points, with only a few small advances recorded in Latin Americans. United States Treasury issues showed losses to a full point, and corporate bonds were down 1 to 3 points.

The largest decline of the day was noted in Belgian 7s of 1955, which traded 25½ points lower at 72⅝. Australian and Canadian bonds fell 2 to 7 points and mostly attained lows for the year. German bonds fell 1 to 2 points. Norwegian and Danish obligations lost recent gains, while Italians suffered with the rest.

Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds fell around a point. Speculative domestic railroad bonds were rather vulnerable. Recessions were 1 to 3 points.

M. F. Converse, Ex-Office Boy Heads Bank Group

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, May 10.—Myron F. Converse, who rose from office boy to president of the Worcester Five Cents Savings Bank, was elected president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks today.

In an address prepared for a closing session of the association convention, the new president said he regarded the fact that mutual savings banks of the Nation had more depositors and a greater total of deposits than ever before in history as an encouraging sign for the future.

"Such deposits, exceeding ten billions of dollars, are distributed among fifteen and a half millions of accounts, a remarkable evidence of wealth widely held," Converse said. "Beyond doubt these facts proved that the average citizen has not surrendered the American ideal of personal independence won by his own efforts.

Terp Trackmen Meet Army

Georgetown, Maryland Nines Clash

Kehoe and DeLatour Half-Mile Duel Is Expected to Feature Track Competition

Prospect of a stirring half-mile duel between Maryland's Jim Kehoe and Army's Capt. Frank De Latour has heightened interest in the track meet which will be co-featured with baseball today at College Park.

Kehoe, one of the country's finest 880 runners and wheelhorse of the Terrapin squad which romped off with three major titles in the recent Penn relays, figures to be extended for the first time outdoors. As a matter of fact the slender Maryland star probably will be forced to a new Byrd Stadium record if he is to defeat his Cadet rival. For De Latour has covered the distance in 1:54, which is one and four-fifths seconds under Kehoe's best time and only seven-tenths of a second under Coleman Headley's Stadium mark of 1:53.3.

Heavy Sports Card

The Army-Maryland meet together with the second meeting in a week of Maryland and Georgetown nines features a heavy local college sports card. Prominent on the schedule is the invasion of Annapolis by Maryland's seeking lacrosse team which, if successful against the Middies, would have only to beat Johns Hopkins to retain its national intercollegiate title.

Hereabouts the Washington Athletic Association lacrosse squad will meet Virginia at 3 p. m. at Central Stadium and Gallaudet will play host to Loyola of Baltimore, for a dual track meet at 2 p. m. at Kendall Green.

In out-of-town engagements the George Washington nine plays western Maryland; the Catholic University track risks its 12-meet victory streak against John Hopkins; the Wilson Teachers College diamonders oppose Blue Ridge and the Maryland netmen compete in the Southern Conference championships.

Springer vs. Wixted

Lefty Earl Springer, ace of the Maryland pitching staff and undefeated this season, will be entrusted with the responsibility of halting Georgetowns booming bats and evening the current series of the rivals at 1 all when they meet at 2:30 today. Shut out, 5-0, Wednesday by Vinnie Powers and his Georgetown mates, the Terrapins need a victory today to retain their unofficial D. C. college title, gained by two victories over the Hilltoppers last year.

Starting pitcher for Georgetown will be right-handed Bill Wixted, conqueror in a relief role of Fordham's strong nine last week.

Bill Guckeyson, former Maryland football star; DeLatour, Ralph Ross, winner of the Penn relays shot put event, and Bill Gillis, captain-elect of the 1940 Army football team, will lead the Cadet track team against the Terrapins promptly at 3 p. m. Guckeyson, who easily won the javelin throw in the Penn carnival, is entered in that and two other events—the shot and the discus. Ross, of course, will be in the shot put and Gillis, one of the Easts better sprinters, will compete in the 00 and 220.

The meeting of Gillis with Joe Murphy, Marylands Southern Conference dash champion, should pack about as much action as the expected duel between Kehoe and DeLatour.

MUNHALL.

Indians Rally And Turn Back Browns, 9 to 4

Cleveland, May 10.—The Cleveland Indians spotted St. Louis four runs today, then produced two well-timed barrages for a 9-to-4 victory over the Browns in the first of the three-game series.

Vernon Kennedy, the St. Louis starter, held a good lead when the second-place Indians shelled him for five hits and as many runs in the fifth inning, and added four more tallies on five bingles in the eighth after Kennedy made way for a pinch hitter.

Al Milnar, the winner, was ineffective but after Harry Eisenstat appeared in the sixth the Browns never threatened. The victory, Cleveland's third in a row, kept the Tribe a game and a half behind the winning Boston Red Sox.

Gumbert Hurls Five-Hit Game; Beats Dodgers

Giants Score 7-2 Victory, League Leader's Margin Cut

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 10.—Big Harry Gumbert is Brooklyn's pet peeve today.

For he hurled beautiful five-hit ball to down the league leading Dodgers, 7 to 2, for the hated Giants and ruin what started out last night to be one of the greatest cases of athletic hysteria on record.

More than 10,000 welcomed the Dodgers home from a successful road swing—but Gumbert was not one of their admirers and showed it clearly today.

Harry allowed two runs and two hits in the first inning, but thereafter he was chary about letting the Dodgers have anything good to swing at, and he blanked them for the last eight innings, allowing only three hits over that route.

The loss, which cut the Dodgers' lead over the idle Cincinnati Reds to one-half game, saw neither Whit Wyatt nor Wes Ferrell able to check the hitting of the Giants, who collected a total of 12 safeties.

The Giants jumped on Wyatt in the first inning, scoring three runs, with two of them coming when Harry Danning homered with a mate aboard. Wyatt was then effective till the sixth when he was lifted after three straight Giant singles had produced another run. Ferrell temporarily stemmed the tide, but the Giants nipped him for three runs in the eighth. A crowd of 26,608 saw the game.

Scalzo and Covelli Arrive for Title Go

Featherweight Champion Petey Scalzo and Frank Covelli, fifth ranking contender for the title, arrived here yesterday for their 15-round title fight Wednesday night at Griffith Stadium.

Covelli detrained early in the morning and repaired to Turner's Arena for a few busy rounds with the punching bag. Scalzo arrived in afternoon and followed Covelli in a drill at Turner's. Both appeared in top condition despite their train rides. Covelli appeared without Manager Izzy Kline whom he said would join him today or tomorrow.

and when the shortstop fumbled, Peacock scored. Crosetti was saved from an error when Joe Gordon made a quick recovery of the grounder to force Wilson in a rundown.

Wilson was the winning pitcher by virtue of stopping a Yankee rally in the seventh and pitching scoreless ball the rest of the way. Chandler was credited with the loss.

Pirates Snap Losing Streak, Beating Cubs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 10.—Pittsburgh snapped its nine-game losing streak today with an 8-to-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Mace Brown's five-hit pitching and a five-run attack on Bill Lee and Charley Root in the sixth inning.

The Pirates knocked Lee out of the box in that frame with four singles by Deb Garms, Paul Waner, Elbie Fletcher and Lee Handley, producing two runs and tying the score at 3-all. At this point Root took the mound and Virgil Davis greeted him with a home run for three more tallies.

It was the Cubs' fourth defeat in five games and dropped them from third place to a fourth-place tie with St. Louis.

Buck Newsom Hurls Detroit To 3-0 Victory

Allows Chisox Seven Hits; Tigers Get All Runs in Sixth

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 10.—Big Louie (Buck) Newsom pitched the Detroit Tigers to their first shutout victory of the year today as he scattered seven hits to beat the Chicago White Sox, 3 to 0.

The Tigers also obtained seven safeties off Johnny Rigney and Clint Brown, but combined two singles, a double and two walks for all of their runs in the sixth inning. Newsom did not allow a foe to get beyond second base.

The winning rally, staged at Rigney's expense, started with a pass to Dick Bartell after one was gone. Bruce Campbell singled him to third and when Gehringer singled Bartel came home and Campbell took third. Earl Averill brought Campbell home with a double and a pass to Rudy York filled the bases. Pete Fox brought Gehringer in with a long fly and Frank Higgins ended the outburst with a grounder.

The Tigers played without Hank Greenberg and Barney McCosky, both of the regular outfielders being out with injuries.

Jenkins Flattens Ambers in Third

Thirty seconds after the opening bell Ambers was on the floor for a five count, his face registering more surprise than pain at the sudden assault of Jenkins. He had been clipped on the chin with a long right hand by the Texan.

In the second round Ambers again went down for five, this time from a long left, and this time he was in real distress. He had no defense for the relentless kid from Texas who now had the taste of the title on his palate and was hungry for more.

There was nothing apologetic in the attitude of Three-to-One-Shot Jenkins as the first round began. As calmly as if he were facing another preliminary boy, he stalked the champion into a neutral corner and began pumping punches to Ambers' head.

They hurt. Ambers essayed to fight back, then resorted to his ring cunning to get out of close quarters In midring, the amazing Jenkins tagged the champion with a long right. Down went Ambers, and up rose the 19,000 in the Garden to see the spectacle of a champion on the floor.

Only by his masterful bobbing on the ropes did Ambers last out the round, but at the finish he was dancing and the suspicion was that he would yet come back to teach the kid from Texas a boxing lesson and save his title.

Ambers Down Again

But in the second round, it was not Ambers but Jenkins who was the boxing master. Gaining boldness, the Texan speared the champ with fancy lefts and when he got only a feeble return, he cut loose in midring with a long right that missed and a long left that didn't. That last punch put Ambers down for five more seconds.

As the bell sounded for the end of the second round, with Ambers feebly trying to tie up the murderous Texan, Jenkins failed to hear the gong. He hit Ambers twice on the chin with hard rights and the Garden fans booed lustily, but no action was taken to forfeit the round to Ambers.

"The question at issue," continues R. A. D., "is whether after A had bid one diamond and B had bid one spade and A had bid one no trump, B was correct in bidding two spades, or should he have gone higher?"

B's bid of two spades was entirely too weak. He must make some aggressive bid on the second round to keep his partner going until game. Three spades would have done it and also won another round of information from A; with slightly more strength in A's hand there would be a play for six.

Wayne King, who gives diamond rings to listeners whose letters about their favorite songs are read on his Saturday night C. B. S. program, is responsible for making "official" the engagement of John A. Conway, senior at Ohio Weslyan University. Thanking the "Waltz King" for choosing his letter and sending the ring, Conway wrote: "You made it possible for me to become 'officially' engaged to the 'one and only.' The girl to whom I am to give the ring has been my sweetheart for five years."

Ted Husing, ace C. B. S. sports reporter, has received a hurry-up request from Tommy Harmon, University of Michigan all-America halfback in 1939, for "some sports dope" which Tommy can include in his term paper on the subject of "Sports." Harmon, ranked by many Midwestern football experts with the great Red Grange, revealed to Ted his ambition to be a sports announcer. He has been conducting a 15-minute sports program over the University of Michigan station for several months.

"Double trouble" is being experienced by Jack Leonard, ballad singer with Raymond Scott's "Concert in Rhythm," on C. B. S. network, and John Tillman, announcer of the program. Girl autograph fans gathered outside the C. B. S. radio theater after the show, frequently besiege Tillman, mistaking him for the vocalist. Jack and John are of the same general build, nearly six feet tall, weighing 160 pounds and both have brown hair.

Orphans in Love

By Marion White

SYNOPSIS

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since the days both were children together at St. Joseph's Orphanage. Peter refuses to declare his love for Ellen, fearing they would be impoverished on his small salary should they marry while he is studying law. While picknicking near the orphanage, a storm causes them to take refuge in the old Tucker house, a deserted old mansion forbidden to them when they were children. In a picture on the wall they see a man with a face so similar to Peters that Ellen mistakes it for Peter's picture. In a book in the living room titled "Notable New Yorkers" they learn the man in the picture on the wall is Peter Tucker, a Revolutionary War hero.

Chapter 5

"COURAGE like that wasn't handed down to this generation," he remarked after a moment. "We're softies. Coddled on steam heat and cream puffs . . ."

"We are not!" Ellen contradicted emphatically. "Character doesn't change with the years. You'd do just as much as he did, if you were ever called upon."

Useless Cog

"Me? Don't ever believe it. I'm just another useless cog in the wheels, a $30-a-week cog . . . My whole life's work will probably never mean as much to the world as one of those dispatches he carried when he was only a boy . . . Lord, I'd like to know more about him."

"So would I." Her eyes traveled slowly and thoughtfully from Peter to the picture over the fireplace, back to Peter again.

Moments Pass

Moments passed, but in the Tucker house time stood still. It might have been an hour, 2 hours later, when Peter, aware of a change in the weather, glanced out of the window. The sky, seen through the trees, was brilliantly blue.

"The storm's passed over. I suppose we should be going."

Ellen nodded. "I almost hate to . . ."

"So do I. But we'll feel mighty foolish if a State Trooper comes along and asks us what we're doing here."

Slowly, almost reluctantly, he crossed the room and closed the shutter he had opened. Ellen looked up at the portrait, taking her last leave of it.

"Ellen——"

He drew her to him, and his arm closed about her.

"Something has happened to me today. Here in this room. I don't know what it is. I can't understand it yet." His voice was hushed, almost reverential.

Heart Quickens

Her heart quickened in glad ecstasy; she knew then that he had felt it too, this realization that possession was only a matter of circumstances, and the fact of birth was unimportant.

Save for the incident of time and place, he might have been Jonathan Tucker, whose face smiled down upon them, a man whose life was fulfilled because his courage was high.

"You know how I feel about you, don't you, Ellen, dear? You know that I——"

He stopped, abruptly. His next words killed the glad hope even as it was born: they brought forth a new despair, bleak and insurmountable.

"But I'll never drag you down! I promise that . . ." His arm relaxed its hold upon her. He turned and faced the man above the fireplace squarely. "The house is a challenge, Ellen. I know it now. I can never be content with less. I will not be!"

The picture at the movies was a thrilling Western drama, vibrant with manufactured daring and circumstantial triumph. Peter watched the characters on the screen and saw them not at all, for in his mind this past week only one character had dwelt, to the exclusion of all others, Jonathan Tucker.

Now, as the mountains of Nevada enfolded on the silver screen, he saw the full-rigged sails of the old schooner White Star instead: as the cowboy hero fled across the ranges to the rescue of the maiden, Peter walked the deck of the ship, sensing the roll of the sea beneath him. He saw not Nevada, but Amoy . . . Samarang . . . Zanzibar.

He knew every port of call the White Star had made on that first triumphant voyage. He knew the details of each transaction. It had all been recorded in a book on early American shipping which he had discovered in the public library.

Five evenings and all this Saturday afternoon he had spent there, poring every volume which had reference to the old firm of Tucker & Sons. He knew as much about the family tradition as if the information had been handed down by word of mouth.

He knew, for instance, that after the first voyage of the White Star, Jonathan had returned and married Miss Nancy Adams, from the town of Stony Point. He knew of the couple's five sons, of the eldest, who had sailed with John Paul Jones on the frigate Constitution, of the youngest, who had drowned in the Hudson River.

He knew that there had been 11 grandchildren, but only one grandson, born in 1834, and named Jonathan Tucker 3d. There the information stopped.

Nor was the firm of Tucker & Sons mentioned in later shipping registers, though Peter would not permit the thought that failure had overtaken it.

Of late years he had discovered nothing. Of the house, he knew no more than what he had half heard in his childhood. More he would have to unearth upon a later visit to Riverview.

This Sunday, perhaps, he'd browse around the town and talk with the old natives. They would tell him something. Who kept the house so trim and white, for example?

Who had furnished the living-room in so modern a fashion? Who had hung the old portrait over the fireplace?

Warm Air

The night air was warm as they emerged from the theater, heavy with promise of early fall. Broadway, even up in this Morningside section, was crowded with Saturday night pleasure seekers. Peter studied them grimly, saw himself as part of the common, mediocre herd.

"Some day," he promised Ellen, "we'll celebrate, you and I. In style. There'll be no halfway measures. Orchids on your shoulder, milady . . . top hat and tails for yours truly. . . . the best will be none too good. Champagne and lobster and crepes suzette. A hired Rolls instead of a 30 cent taxi. We'll go where the cover charge is highest——"

"I accept, Prince Peter!" Ellen laughed happily. "But for tonight—just for tonight—let's settle for a chocolate soda." She propelled him into the drug store. "Do we sit at the counter or have you reserved a table?"

"We'll take that private booth in the corner. There's something on my mind to tell you."

To Be Continued.

Ft. Meade Post Will Become Tank Unit Soon

Troops to Be Shifted On June 1, 391 Going to 67th Infantry

The Thirty-fourth Infantry Regiment at nearby Fort George G. Meade, Md., will go out of existence June 1 to make way for tank and antitank units of the modernized Army.

Of the 1,035 troops of the Thirty-fourth, 391 will be shifted to the First Battalion of the Sixty-seventh Infantry, a medium tank regiment, and another 310 will make up the new unit, to be known as the Third Antitank Battalion.

Both of these latter units will be at Fort Meade, carrying on tank vs. antitank training, in accordance with the Army's modernization program.

In future sham battles at Fort Meade, the 18-ton tanks of the Sixty-seventh as well as the light tanks of the Sixty-sixth Infantry already there will face the bristling muzzles of the newly developed 37-millimeter antitank guns.

Of the remaining troops in the Infantry unit to be abolished, 129 have already been transferred to the Sixth Cavalry at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.; 171 will go to Fort Benning, Ga., to make up units of the Sixty-seventh Infantry stationed there, and the remainder of the men, mainly ranking noncommissioned officers, will scatter to various units over the country. The band of the Thirty-fourth will become the band of the Sixty-seventh.

They'll Dance 'Round the Maypole at the County Fair

Health Valued As Weapon, Canadians Say

Conference Here Told 'Offensive Is On Against Disease'

Three of Canada's provincial public health chiefs declared here yesterday that the Dominion considers good health as much a war weapon as the latest rifle, tank or airplane.

"Our offensive is on against disease, particularly tuberculosis and venereal infections," said Dr. J. T. Phair, chief medical officer of Ontario. He was seconded by Dr. F. W. Jackson, deputy minister of health and public welfare for Manitoba, and Dr. R. O. Davison, deputy minister of public health for Saskatchewan.

Appropriations Increased

Since Canada entered the European conflict, public health appropriations have been increased, despite the costs of prosecuting the war, because of universal appreciation of the fact that chances for success are largely dependent upon the population's well-being, the visiting officials declared.

The Canadian contingent to the annual conference of State and Provincial Health Authorities also included Dr. Robert E. Wodehouse, deputy minister of the Dominion's Department of Pensions and National Health, and Dr. G. F. Amyot, British Columbia health officer. They returned to Canada yesterday to prepare for the opening in Ottawa Monday of the Dominion Council of Health's semiannual meeting.

Columbia Aide Speaks

The Canadian-American conference, held in the Public Health Service auditorium, was urged to focus attention on the improvement of public health administration methods, by Dr. Haven Emerson, of Columbia University.

Warning that extension of services has been emphasized in the last few years at the expense of quality, Dr. Emerson recommended that part of the Social Security funds allotted for this work be spent on analytical studies to make administration more efficient.

Suspect Seized In Attack on Girl Near Greenbelt

A suspect answering the description of the man who is alleged to have criminally assaulted a 20-year old Washington beauty parlor employe near Greenbelt, Thursday, was arrested yesterday in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Prince George County, police said.

The man was to be returned to Hyattsville for questioning today.

The woman told police she met the man while bicycle riding in Potomac Park and accepted his offer to take her home. After he had beaten and assaulted her, she said he drove off.

Press Clubbers To Frolic Today

Members of the National Press Club and their guests will hold their annual frolic for 1940 today at Charles Town, W. Va., in traditionally lavish style.

Journeying to and from Charles Town on special trains equipped with club and buffet cars, the Press Clubbers will enjoy a round of entertainment from horse racing to oratory.

U. S. Arsenal Blast Kills 1, Injures 1

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—One man was killed and another seriously injured today in an explosion at the Frankford Arsenal.

Sigma Alphas Win G. W. Debate

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity at George Washington University last night won the annual intramural debate tournament of the university over Kappa Sigma fraternity. The winners upheld the negative of the question, "Resolved, That the Federal Government Should Own and Operate the Railroads."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon was represented by Jackson Englebright and Lee Chandler. Phillip Oliver and George Stakeman were the speakers for Kappa Sigma.

Judge of the affair was Dix Price, of the office of the Secretary of the Senate. The sorority finals, scheduled for last night between Delta Zeta and Kappa Delta, were postponed until next week.

Farley Warns Critics of U. S. Foreign Policy

Advises Against Making It 'Political Pawn' in Talk Lauding Roosevelt

Cincinnati, May 10 (AP).—Praising the Roosevelt Administration's foreign policy, Postmaster General James A. Farley warned critics tonight against making it a political pawn."

Farley in an address prepared for a Democratic rally of the Duckworth Club asserted that "In the whole history of the country, there has never been a time when prudence, caution, judgment and foresight were more needed than they are today in the handling of international problems.

"A single rash act or statement may have a vital effect upon the welfare of the Nation," he asserted.

Farley said the Administration's policy of protecting the country's foreign interests was handled in "superb fashion" without working up "an undue state of alarm," and that a "sensible neutrality policy" is being followed.

"It is to be hoped that in the difficult months ahead, there will be no effort to create political capital by giving a false impression of American foreign policy," he added. "The idea that some individual, utterly lacking in experience, has a patented formula for keeping the country out of war is too absurd to be taken seriously.

"I think every sincere man who aspires to the Presidency should be ready to concede that the other spokesman of his party, and thise of the opposition party, are just as anxious as he is to preserve the blessings of peace for America. The safety of the Nation should not be made a political pawn."

Julius Wenig, 68, Architect, Dies; Funeral Monday

Funeral services for Julius Wenig, 68, an architect in Washington for more than 40 years, will be held Monday at 9 a. m. with mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

New York Fair Reopens Today

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 10.—Promised good weather, the World's Fair of 1940 in New York opens tomorrow for its second year, its sponsors sure that they have a better and brighter show than in 1939 and at cheaper prices. The second season will run through October 27, and in the 170 days of the return engagement the fair hopes to surpass the 25,817,265 paid admissions of 1939.

Gates will open at 10 a. m.

Communion Breakfast

The Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville, Md., and the Montgomery Council of Knights of Columbus will join in a communion breakfast tomorrow morning in St. Mary's Hall.

Income Rise Could Wipe Out Increase In Debt, Says McNutt

Phoenix, Ariz., May 11 (AP).—The increase in national debt, "about which the Republicans shed so many tears," could be wiped out with the increased income of one year under the New Deal, Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, said here tonight.

In an address at a Democratic mass meeting, McNutt acclaimed President Roosevelt as "one of the truly great men of the century" and credited the Democratic Party with leading the Nation out of depression. He challenged the Republicans to offer a constructive program.
